Jaycees give CP $25,000

A check for $25,000 was presented Tuesday night to members of the Scott-Mississippi-New Madrid Counties United Cerebral Palsy Affiliate by the Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Inc.

The presentation was made during the regular meeting of the Sikeston Jaycees at the Country Club.

The money will be used by the affiliate in the construction of a new 5,000-square-foot children's therapy center to be named the Kenny Rogers United Cerebral Palsy Development Center.

The building which is being designed Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes of Sikeston, will be constructed on a site yet to be announced by the Cerebral Palsy board.

Efforts by Weber Gilmore, a board member for the affiliate, are being made to have the new center built near the New Dawn State School on Glenn Drive.

Lloyd Stoner, chairman of the Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo, said that past rodeo funds have been used for various community projects. An example of this would be the portion of funds from last years rodeo given to the city for the purchase of a new fire engine.

"This year by unanimous decision, the Jaycees voted to give the money from the successful annual Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo to the Cerebral Palsy group, for the building of the new center."

Stoner presented the check to Weber Gilmore, a board member, who in turn praised the Jaycees for their efforts.

Gilmore, a member of the Jaycees when they had their first rodeo, said "this money will help a child walk that cannot walk."

Charles Stamp Jr., president of the Jaycees,read to the group a telegram he had received from Kenney Rogers, who is in Scotland, congratulating the Cerebral Palsy Affiliate.

In mid-October Rogers donated his grey, seven-year-old, Arabian stallion, Borraabby, to the Cerebral palsy affiliate. Proceeds from the sale of the horse will go toward the building of the new center.

Jim Clay one of the members of the group working on the t ransportation of the horse to Missouri from California, said today that arrangements have been made and that the arrival of the horse is to be sometime this week.

Opening of the Hunter- Dawson House not expected until summer of 1980

NEW MADRID — Opening of the Hunter-Dawson House to the public is not expected until the summer of 1980, according to State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin. The house is a State Historic Site, located on Route U (Dawson Road).

Tinnin disclosed that the Department of Natural Resources had not made a request for any capital improvements during the current fiscal year. Tinnin was a recent guest of the Lucy Jefferson Lewis Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and made a tour of the pre-Civil War house.

The department is expected to request $55,000 in appropriations in the 1979 fiscal year, Tinnin said, for interior renovation.

In 1966 when the city of New Madrid donated the large two-story, 15-room house, and 14 and a half acres of land, to the state to be developed into a state park, it was estimated the restoration and development would be complete within two years at a cost of about $120,000.

The project was to proceed in three phases. The house would first be fully restored, then the large assortment of antique furnishings was to be repaired and refinished and the final phase included landscaping of the grounds to complete the era setting to its authentic original appearance.

According to figures quoted by Tinnin, a total of $167,271 has been spent for capital improvements since 1968 when the restoration work started.

For fiscal year of 1968, $3,434 was spent for general maintenance and repair; in fiscal year in 1969, $24,837, was spent for renovation of the house and extensive work to the grounds; in fiscal year 1070, $4,000 for general maintenance and repair; for fiscal year 1974, $2,000 for general maintenance and repair; and for fiscal year of 1976-77, $133,000 for renovation of the exterior of the house, including roof, windows and trim rebuilt, plus new wiring, heating, plumbing and cooling.

"The appropriations for this and other historic sites is made in one large figure known as 'existing state parks'."

In the budget request by the department, they itemize the request for each historic site.

"I approved all these appropriations for the Hunter- Dawson home in the Senate Appropriations Committee," Tinnin said.

"All plans are being made by the Division of Design and Construction, in Jefferson City. The architect is Gerhardt Kramer of St. Louis, who is planning the restoration.

"With the 1979 request we hope to finish the interior -- wallpaper, paint, plaster, etc., and restore and replace furnishings. We hope to open to the public in the summer of 1980 a completely restored, heated and air conditioned building," Tinnin added.

Garrett sentenced to life

NEW MADRID — New Madrid County Circuit Court Judge William L. Ragland Tuesday sentenced Arvin Junior Garrett, also known as Jim Garrett, 29, of rural Gideon, to life in prison.

Garrett had been convicted in a jury trial on Oct. 26 of first degree murder in the April 22 beating death of 69-year old Ira H. Smith of Tallapoosa in an apparent robbery.

The sentence, which had been fixed by the jury, was pronounced by Judge Ragland, after he denied a motion for new trial filed on behalf of the defendant by Public Defender Blair Buckley.

During the brief proceedings, Buckley said he did not wish to present any argument on the motion at that time.

When asked by Judge Ragland if he had any legal cause to show why sentence should not be passed or if he had anything to say , Garrett merely replied "Ain't got nothing to sav."

David Thomas Frazier, 21, of Campbell Route One, also charged with first degree murder in the death remains in custody in Mississippi County where he is awaiting trial on a change of venue from New Madrid County.

Charles Partee and Willie Lee Crenshaw entered guilty pleas to burglary and stealing charges in connection with the Oct. 16 break-in and theft of merchandise from Foster's Grocery & Market in Portageville.

Both were sentenced to two years on each charge, to run concurrently, and were granted probation under supervision.

Bus drivers meet here

Bus drivers from six area school districts attended a workshop Tuesday night at the Sikeston Junior High School.

The four-hour class was sponsored by the State Department of Education and was designed to improve the safety of bus transportation.

Sixty-six bus driver's attended, including 10 from Richland, nine from Bernie, eight from New Madrid, 17 from Charlestoon, two from Scott Central R-V and 22 from Sikeston.

The classes cover such topics as, the driver and public relations, the driver and student discipline, techniques and courtesy of defensive driving, state laws pertaining to buses, purpose and location of safety equipment and school bus evaluation procedures.

This is the 11th year for the class and the first time it has been held in Sikeston. Drivers are asked to take the course for at least three years.

The drivers were taught by seven instructors including Sgt. Joe Matthews of the Missouri State Highway Patrol.

The class will be held tonight in Kennett and Thursday night in Poplar Bluff.

UW is 10% of goal

United Way President Bill Marsh announced today that the Sikeston Kroger store became the first business to get pledges from 100 percent of its employees.

Kroger manager Jim Pendleton told Marsh Tuesday that Kroger employees pledged over $1,500 to this year's United Way campaign.

Marsh said he is expecting several other company pledges to come in the next few days, including one pledge that is expected to make up 15 percent of the total budget.

Over 10 percent of the total has been collected in the first five days of the campaign, but Marsh noted that $4,000 is still a long way from the goal of $41,000.

Teacher's art work on display

"An art teacher has to have a serious concentration of art and be familiar with all kinds of techniques," according to Marsha Dement, native Sikestonian, whose work is displayed this week at the Bank of Sikeston.

Because of the awareness of the concentration needed, Marsha received a Bachelor of Arts and also a Bachelor of Fine Arts when she graduated this spring from Stephens College at Columbia.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Dement of 704 Allen Blvd., Marsha is an art instructor at Sikeston Junior High School and girl's tennis coach for Junior High School and Senior High School.

"I knew my freshman year in high school that I wanted to be an art teacher," said the local artist since that time her work has been, "A personal statement," of what she's learned.

"This show is a retrospect of my freshman year on art," said Miss Dement. The work shows the progression of an artist. Marsha doesn't consider herself just an artist or an art teacher, because she thinks they are equally important, "I guess I'm an artist-art educator."

During the summer of 1975, Miss Dement had an educational experience in the world of art that took her to Stephen's sister college, Fukoka Women's Junior College, in Dazaifu, Japan.

Students studied Japanese brush painting, Buddism and the culture of the country. Miss Dement expressed much interest in the brush painting, or calligraphy, as it's known in Japan.

After Marsha returned from the summer seminar, she said her work centered around what she had learned in Japan abstract expressionist. To achieve this method of art, Marsha uses colors and lines, elements and principals to visullay communicate a statement or idea showing something at a different point of view.

Other exhibits of Miss Dement's work include: 1977 Senior Art Show, Davis Art Gallery, Stephens College; 1976 Columbia Art League Membership Show, Columbia; Print Show, "Empty Frame" (Stephens Student Art Gallery), 1975-1976; Prize Winner, Sikeston Winter '75 Art League Exhibit, 1975.

CABLE TV UNLEASHED

The U.S. Supreme Court makes as much law by the cases it chooses not to hear as by those on which it hands down decisions.

Early this month, the court declined to review a ruling made last March by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the matter of the Federal Communications Commission versus Home Box Office. The action — or non-action — could have far-reaching effects on the kind of television programming available to Americans in years to come.

The decision by the Court of Appeals was the culmination of a long-running battle between commercial television broadcasters and the cable television industry, between so-called free TV and pay TV, with the FCC in the middle.

At issue were the FCC's regulations limiting movies and sports events which could be shown on cable television, the system under which subscribers pay a monthly fee to have special programs piped into their homes. Cablecasters were prohibited, for example, from showing any film between three and ten years old, as well as many major sports events, even those not broadcast by commercial television.

The three-judge appeals panel found unanimously that there was no evidence that cable television would adversely affect either the public interest or over-the-air television; that the FCC had no statutory authority to regulate pay cable TV; and that it s restrictions violated the medium's First Amendment right of free speech.

Thus released from FCC regulation, will pay cable now proceed to "siphon off" events like the World Series or the Super Bowl which Americans now watch for free, as the commercial broadcasters have warned from the beginning?

In testimony before a Senate subcommittee this summer, spokesmen for the cable televison industry said they had no intention of doing so.

In any event, nothing is going to change very much very quickly. For one thing, although some 3,000 cable TV systems currently serve nearly 12 million homes around the country, the industry is still up against commercial TV's enormous bidding power and what the cablecasters charge is the networks' contractual "lock" on new movies.

And should the adverse effects the Court of Appeals saw no sign of beginning to materialize, there is nothing to prevent Congress from enacting legislation to protect free TV.

What the decision has done is to lift a cloud of uncertainty that has hovered over the future of cable TV and to give promise not of less but of greater program diversity for the television watching public.

HEARTS ARE TRUMPS

Grandma always baked me a cherry pie when I went to see her during school holidays. After she died, I dreaded that first visit alone with my grandfather. Grandpap, blind in one eye and almost blind in the other, often said that Grandma was his eyes. And I wondered how he could manage by himself.

The day I went to see him, he asked me to stay for lunch. As we were finishing, he handed me a slice of home-made-cherry pie. How nice of my aunt, I thought, to have shared a pie with him. But I was in for a surprise.

"I know Grandma always made a pie for you," he said "I didn't want to disappoint you, so I baked this fresh this morning." More than an act of love, this was Grandpa 's way of saying that he was doing all right.

PRIVILEGES OF FRIENDSHIP

The Kansas Editor, Ed Howe, once said something like this: "Istead of loving your enemies, treat your friends a little better." Frequently friends are the most neglected people on earth.

There are certain privileges of friendship. One of them, perhaps, is not to have to be on our best behavior when we are with them. But sometimes that is much abused, especially by those who feel free to say tactless things to those they know best

Oliver Wendell Holmes put this way: "Don't flatter yourself that friendship authorizes you to say disagreeable things to your intimates. On the contrary, the you come into a relationship with a person, the more necessary do tact and courtesy become. Except in cases of necessity, which are rare, leave your friend to learn unpleasant truths from his enemies; they are ready enough to tell him."

WHY HE WAS GOOD

Just before the great Paderewski sailed for Europe after completing a highly successful concert tour of the United States, he made this statement:

"There have been a few monemts when I have known complete satisfaction, but only a few. I have rarely been free from the disturbing realization that my playing might have been better."

The secret of Paderewski's greatness lay in his dissatisfaction with his own efforts. As long as he remained unhappy about his playing, he was constantly striving to improve himself. Although the world held him to be perfect, he himslef knew his own weaknesses, and kept constantly at the job of improving his technique.

GUN CONTROLS WORK

A federal crackdown on illegal firearms in three major U.S. cities offers compelling neww evidence that tighter gun controls do in fact reduce crim. In Washington, Chicago and Boston, where federal agents enforced strict gun controls in an experimental program over the past year, gun-related crimes dropped 21 per cent, while such crimes nationallyy dipped only 14 per cent.

If congress and the Carter Administration had any lingering doubt s about the urgent need for national gun controls—after the tragic .44-cal. killings in New York City, the equally senseless sniper slayyings of six persons in New Jersey and the scores of similar shooting incident reported routinely in the press—certainly the results of the federal three-city crackdown should help dispel them.

The program called Concentrated Urban Enforcement (CUE) doubled the number of federal agents in the test cities, focused on tracing the origin of every gun associated with a crime and increased the inspections of federally licensed gun dealers. The CUE experiment also highlighted another aspect of gun-related crimes—i.e., the flow of firearms from areas gun laws are lax into cities where gun controls are strict.

Firearms manufacturers and other opponents of gun controls understandable argue that people, not firearms, commit crimes. Certainly unemployment urban decay, lack of parental guidance and other social conditions that contribute to crime should be vigorously attacked. But equally clear, as the federal crackdown shows, the availability of guns is a major contributor to violent crime and access to them should be tightly regulated.

President Carter reportedly is about to introduce long overdue legislation that would ban the manufacture and sale of small, cheap handguns and place stricter responsibilities on persons selling and buying weapons.

Strictly enforced, uniform national controls are direly needed. This is not time for Congress or the Carter Administration to delay. —The Chrisitan Science Monitor.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

From the Los Angeles Times

We join the thousands of listeners of the British Broadcasting Corp's world service in urging the British government to reject recommendations to curtail the activities of what represents the finest expression of international broadcasting.

The BBC's news, commentary and other programs beamed to overseas listeners provide a vital source of untainted information about what is happening in the world. Its unrivaled standards of accuracy and dependability are increasingly important in puncturing the barriers of censorship that are being erected in many parts of the Third World to suppress or channel information to conform to governmental policy.

The BBC and other Western broadcasters provide millions of listeners with an important alternative to the controlled media in the Soviet Union and other Communist states.

Thus, any effort to restrict the broadcasts of the BBC would be a blow to international understanding, and to the free flow of information that is vital in the quest for improving human rights.

Yet, government planners in London want to curtail the BBC's foreign service by about 40 per cent as part of a economy move. Such cuts may make economic sense, but the effect of the expenditures for the overseas service cannot be measured in the ledgers of a accountants.

As one listener put it: "In a desperate world, the BBC stands like a lighthouse of integrity."

We hope that light will not be dimmed.

COVER-UP

One spring day we watched as an elderly homeowner in a new housing development decorated his front yard, apparently for a party. Over his newly planted lawn he tied balloons on tree branches. More balloons were attached to the fence and some were even staked to the ground. When no party developed, and the man kept replacing shrunken balloons, we decided that he was becoming childish. It wasn't until the tenth day, when he removed the balloons, that we realized that his lawn had come up a smooth green carpet, undisturbed by the flocks of blackbirds that had feasted unchallenged on our new lawns.

'Jimmy' Sees the Light: President Agrees with Black Leaders On a $20 Billion Full Employment Law

WASHINGTON — Recently the White House did a chair count of Congressional Black Caucus members who head or influence powerful committees in the House. All the President's men did a double take.

Black Representatives chair key committees ranging from the Panama Canal subcommittee, the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, the subcommittee on employment opportunities and Yvonne Burke's Select Committee on the House Beauty Shop. It also happens that she and Louis Stokes are on the Appropriations Committee. And Brooklyn's Shirley Chisholm sits on Rules.

At the same time, Jimmy Carter began negotiating with influential House blacks over the $18 billion to $20 billion-a-year Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill.

Obviously the Congressional Black Caucus has been and is in a strategic bargaining position.

Not only is the Caucus in the House power structure through its chairships of two standing committees and 14 subcommittees and through the influence of such men as Harlem's Charley Rangel on Ways and Means, but it also launched a coalition of 32 powerful pressure groups including a solid front of women and labor groups.

In this 95th Congress the caucus has been going for broke in its fight for the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. They've laid it out as an absolute must for the President personally in the Oval Office. California's Augustus Hawkins and his staff have been in almost endless confidential conferences with the White House's one-man brain trust Stu Eizenstat, his aide Bill Johnston, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Council of Economic Advisers chairman Charles Schultze and -- of course -- Treasury Secretary Mike Blumenthal. Bert Lance would have dumped the whole package.

It's probably the heaviest bundle any group hopes to deliver to its constituency. In years it will cost some $100 billion.

For a long while the President bucked. He finally buckled when the entire black community and the caucus and the Urban League's Vernon Jordan and NAACP's Benjamin Hooks went after him publicly and loudly.

At first the President refused to be locked into a law which would automatically pour billions of dollars into new public works, hospital and health projects, transportation and vast slum clearance.

But Gus Hawkins and the caucus wanted no rhetoric. No endorsement of a full employment principle without the specifics of automatic -- and compulsory -- creation of millions of jobs.

Thus the behind-the- scenes negotiations pivoted on "the trigger." What formula would be devised which would flood the nation with the money for immediate hiring?

At first the Black Caucus -- hardly excited by Yazoo City and South Bronx excursions -- wanted billions to be spent automatically until unemployment fell to 3 per cent of the adult population. And in four years.

But this was too steep a plunge for the President. So they bargained. The caucus, mostly through Hawkins' staff, yielded a bit. They'd said they'd go along with a "trigger" which would get the jobless down to 4 per cent n four years. But they know their constituencies -- the burned-out desolation of the inner cities.

So they argued successfully that the jobless figures must include youngsters beginning with 16 years of age.

The President's men countered with a "trigger" of 4.75 per cent "acceptable" jobless rate. And in five years.

There now are some seven million jobless -- about 7.1 per cent of the work force.

The caucus held its lines and targets.

Thus now the trigger, give a decimal point or two in the new bill, is cocked at 4 per cent as "acceptable" joblessness. Anytime unemployment goes above that mark the public funds must automatically be spent to push joblessness everythwere back to the 4 per cent line or less.

Mind you, this means that $18 or $20 billion must be spent annually above current expenditure of public works money. Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) funds and all the rest.

If the bill passes next year it will be precedent- smashing. There have been such concepts in the past. There have been laws calling for full employment. But never has there been a law anywhere in the world, I believe, which makes mandatory the automatic expenditure of billions of dollars when employment rises above a set figure -- and a low one at that.

President Carter has asked for the power to modify the figures in some fashion. But he would have to come back to Congress. Anyway, that's small print stuff. The significant development is in the setting of "the trigger."

Provision for automatic counter-action by spending billions for what essentially are jobless black youth is the mark of the coming of age and power of the nation's black political force. And this doesn't spring from Yvonne Burke's control of the House beauty shop.

Rather from conversations such as the one caucus chairman Parren Mitchell had with the President, Thursday (Oct. 27) morning. Jimmy said he'd have the whole caucus "in" and they would talk. It will be friendlier this time. Jimmy knows political power when he's bumped by it.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

HIGH SALARIES AND FIRST-CLASS FRINGES BY PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

Like looking at life through bifocals, there are two ways to look at almost everything.

For example, many people think that federal bureaucrats, by comparision with the wages the rest of us earn, are overpaid and underworked.

However, to federal government employes, the grass is still greener on the other side of the street when they look at the salaries paid to those who work for various world organizations. Even though those world organizations are largely financed by the American taxpayers, their pay scales far exceed those of our own government.

A U.S. federal employee with a GS-18 rank, after this year's pay raise, receives $47,500 a year. But at the World Bank, the same type of job pays $74,100 and at the United Nations, it pays $85,500.

That isn't all. In addition to the usual generous paid vacations and paid sick leave given to federal employes, world organization salaries are often enriched by other fringe benefits such as free first-class trips around the world, country club privileges, education allowances, subsidized cafeterias and tax-free liquor.

The Senate Appropriations reported this year that, in internation banks, "extraordinarily high salaries are commonplace and the pursuit of fringe benefits has been raised to a form of art." The General Accounting Office found that the average World Bank salary is 57 per cent higher than in the U.S. Civil Service.

The United States pays about 25 per cent of the United Nations bill, even though we have only one vote in the 147-member General Assembly. The U.S. taxpayers support high-paying jobs in 48 U.N. agencies.

Expensive first-class air travel is virtually the rule at the World Bank headed by Robert S. McNamara, who left the presidency of the Ford Motor Co., shortly after the failure of the Edsel car and moved to Washington as secretary of defense.

When a World Bank official flew to London this year, he used the most expensive travel available, the Concorde supersonic jet. His round-trip fare cost the bank $1,683, compared with $678 for a regular jet coach fare.

The World Bank receives very large sums from American taxpayers, supposedly to provide programs impoverished countries. The administrators in this internation poverty program hardly need to travel like royalty in order to impress the recipients of their handouts.

A four-week investigation by United Press International disclosed recently that many Washington officials routinely travel first class, even though federal rules prohibit first-class travel except for medical disability or when "deemed necessary for the conduct of the mission."

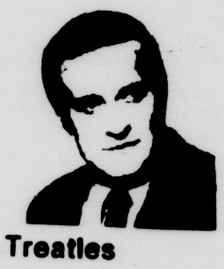

One wonders exactly what was "deemed necessary" when Secretary of Labor F. Ray Marshall and his assistants flew first class to Geneva, Switzerland, and Bonn, West Germany, last June.

In the first place, why was it necessary for an American secretary of labor to go to Switzerland and Germany at all? His jurisdiction is American, not European, labor. In these days of instant communication, he could have obtained anything he needed to know by letter, cablegram, telephone or diplomatic pouch.

Second, why was it "necessary" that the secretary and his assistants all travel first class at an airflight cost to the taxpayers of $5,453?

I've been wondering for a long time who can afford to travel in those first-class seats. Now we know. It's the officials who are paid with the taxpayers' money.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Panamanian Ambassador Gabriel Lewis has just concluded a quick correspondence course on how to win friends on Capitol Hill and influence their votes on the Panama Canal treaties.

He was instructed confidentially to court senators at "breakfast, lunch and dinner," to buy "a meal or two" for hungry reporters, to pass out contributions to the right senators and, above all, not to count on President Carter's inept lobbyists.

Ambassador Lewis sought the advice of a professional persuader, N.C. Livingstone, on what he could do to help persuade the Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaty. The ambassador got back a candid, five-page memo on the letterhead of Hill, Livingstone Associates, a Washington consulting firm.

Livingstone cautioned that the White House lobbyists, headed by the harassed Frank Moore, were babes in the legislative woods. "Few members of Frank Moore's congressional liaison staff at the White House have any real credibility or demonstrable expertise on Capitol Hill," Livingstone tipped off the ambassador. "To trust the White House to win ratification of the treaties is to take a severe risk."

Instead, the memo advised the Panamanians to "concentrate on good, old-fashioned flesh-pressing and shoe-leather diplomacy." Explained the memo: "Build personal ties and rapport with members of the Senate and their staffs. Court them at breakfast, lunch and dinner." In a sentence, Livingstone urged: "Live at the U.S. Senate for the next six months."

Another section of the memo, entitled "Persuasion by Contribution," offered this confidential advice: "Next year is an election year. Perhaps a dozen members of the Senate could be influenced by the promise of contributions or the threat to withhold such contributions. Prominent business and labor leaders could provide such pressure on key undecided members."

Perhaps as an afterthought about the Korean scandal, Livingstone added cautiously: "This is, to be sure, a sensitive matter, but it is in no way unusual in U.S. politics."

The memo included some instructions for manipulating the media. First, it recommended that the Panamanians "forget about the Washington Post and the New York Times." These eminent newspapers, explained Livingstone, "are already on your side."

Instead, he suggested that they concentrate on smaller papers whose Washington correspondents, he said, are often slighted. "Invite them personally to the embassy, grant them interviews, buy them a meal or two," he advised. Stressed the memo: "Most journalists from the smaller publications don't often get invitations of this kind."

As another effective tactic, Livingstone recommended that the Panamanians generate grass-roots pressure. This could be accomplished, he said, by recruiting businessmen and labor leaders to contact senators personally, by establishing close contacts with "key opinion-generators in each state" and by creating a citizens committee of "prominent Americans."

The committee, he suggested, should be "used as a vehicle to take out newspaper ads countering those placed in local newspapers by treaty opponents." He also had some advice on the advertising style: "The ads should be full-page, concise, attractive and composed with snappy journalism; no long-winded expositions."

Footnote: Livingstone told us he wrote the memo as a personal favor. "I haven't received a dime," he said, for his political primer. It was inadvertent, he explained, that the advice was written on his firm's stationery.

Unsung Writer: The conflict in South Africa between the white regime and the black race, between the authorities and the press, has exploded into the open. Out of the repression has risen a host of black heroes. Not the least of them is the martyred Steve Biko who died mysteriously in jail. Black newsmen have also been systematically harassed and suppressed.

But a white man, Donald Woods, is also a victim of the South African police state. For more than two decades, this courageous editor has fought for civil liberties in South Africa. He is now under virtual house arrest — banned from speaking to reporters or even issuing written statements.

His crime? He wrote a column called "My Friend Steve Biko."

Gun Mail: The most militant of the gun groups, the Citizen's Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, may have gone too far. It has sent out mail in the names of congressmen who never authorized it.

Two congressmen whose names were misused, Bob Walker and Bill Goodling, both Pennsylvania Republicans, are considering legal action against the committee. Walker has also complained to the Postal Service.

The gun group fired a shotgun blast of 600,000 letters across the country soliciting money. The envelopes bear the committee's name and trademark in large type. But in the address window, just above the recipient's address, is the statement that the letter is "from" a congressman.

The group's founder, promoter and executive director, Alan Gottlieb, was hot-tempered about the matter. He shouted; he threatened; he screamed. It was "an error by the mail house," he swore. Only one of the 600,000 letters misused a congressman's name, insisted Gottlieb. "Anyone who tells me anything different," he yelled, "is a liar."

CABLE TV UNLEASHED

The U.S. Supreme Court makes as much law by the cases it chooses not to hear as by those on which it hands down decisions.

Early this month, the court declined to review a ruling made last March by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the matter of the Federal Communications Commission versus Home Box Office. The action — or non-action — could have far-reaching effects on the kind of television programming available to Americans in years to come.

The decision by the Court of Appeals was the culmination of a long-running battle between commercial television broadcasters and the cable television industry, between so-called free TV and pay TV, with the FCC in the middle.

At issue were the FCC's regulations limiting movies and sports events which could be shown on cable television, the system under which subscribers pay a monthly fee to have special programs piped into their homes. Cablecasters were prohibited, for example, from showing any film between three and ten years old, as well as many major sports events, even those not broadcast by commercial television.

The three-judge appeals panel found unanimously that there was no evidence that cable television would adversely affect either the public interest or over-the-air television; that the FCC had no statutory authority to regulate pay cable TV; and that it s restrictions violated the medium's First Amendment right of free speech.

Thus released from FCC regulation, will pay cable now proceed to "siphon off" events like the World Series or the Super Bowl which Americans now watch for free, as the commercial broadcasters have warned from the beginning?

In testimony before a Senate subcommittee this summer, spokesmen for the cable televison industry said they had no intention of doing so.

In any event, nothing is going to change very much very quickly. For one thing, although some 3,000 cable TV systems currently serve nearly 12 million homes around the country, the industry is still up against commercial TV's enormous bidding power and what the cablecasters charge is the networks' contractual "lock" on new movies.

And should the adverse effects the Court of Appeals saw no sign of beginning to materialize, there is nothing to prevent Congress from enacting legislation to protect free TV.

What the decision has done is to lift a cloud of uncertainty that has hovered over the future of cable TV and to give promise not of less but of greater program diversity for the television watching public.

HEARTS ARE TRUMPS

Grandma always baked me a cherry pie when I went to see her during school holidays. After she died, I dreaded that first visit alone with my grandfather. Grandpap, blind in one eye and almost blind in the other, often said that Grandma was his eyes. And I wondered how he could manage by himself.

The day I went to see him, he asked me to stay for lunch. As we were finishing, he handed me a slice of home-made-cherry pie. How nice of my aunt, I thought, to have shared a pie with him. But I was in for a surprise.

"I know Grandma always made a pie for you," he said "I didn't want to disappoint you, so I baked this fresh this morning." More than an act of love, this was Grandpa 's way of saying that he was doing all right.

PRIVILEGES OF FRIENDSHIP

The Kansas Editor, Ed Howe, once said something like this: "Istead of loving your enemies, treat your friends a little better." Frequently friends are the most neglected people on earth.

There are certain privileges of friendship. One of them, perhaps, is not to have to be on our best behavior when we are with them. But sometimes that is much abused, especially by those who feel free to say tactless things to those they know best.

Oliver Wendell Holmes put this way: "Don't flatter yourself that friendship authorizes you to say disagreeable things to your intimates. On the contrary, the you come into a relationship with a person, the more necessary do tact and courtesy become. Except in cases of necessity, which are rare, leave your friend to learn unpleasant truths from his enemies; they are ready enough to tell him."

The secret of Paderewski's greatness lay in his dissatisfaction with his own efforts. As long as he remained unhappy about his playing, he was constantly striving to improve himself. Although the world held him to be perfect, he himslef knew his own weaknesses, and kept constantly at the job of improving his technique.

Expensive first-class air travel is virtually the rule at the World Bank headed by Robert S. McNamara, who left the presidency of the Ford Motor Co., shortly after the failure of the Edsel car and moved to Washington as secretary of defense.

When a World Bank official flew to London this year, he used the most expensive travel available, the Concorde supersonic jet. His round-trip fare cost the bank $1,683, compared with $678 for a regular jet coach fare.

The World Bank receives very large sums from American taxpayers, supposedly to provide programs impoverished countries. The administrators in this internation poverty program hardly need to travel like royalty in order to impress the recipients of their handouts.

A four-week investigation by United Press International disclosed recently that many Washington officials routinely travel first class, even though federal rules prohibit first-class travel except for medical disability or when "deemed necessary for the conduct of the mission."

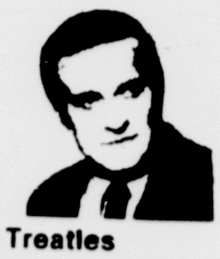

One wonders exactly what was "deemed necessary" when Secretary of Labor F. Ray Marshall and his assistants flew first class to Geneva, Switzerland, and Bonn, West Germany, last June.

In the first place, why was it necessary for an American secretary of labor to go to Switzerland and Germany at all? His jurisdiction is American, not European, labor. In these days of instant communication, he could have obtained anything he needed to know by letter, cablegram, telephone or diplomatic pouch.

Second, why was it "necessary" that the secretary and his assistants all travel first class at an airflight cost to the taxpayers of $5,453?

I've been wondering for a long time who can afford to travel in those first-class seats. Now we know. It's the officials who are paid with the taxpayers' money.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Lobbying for the Treatles

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Panamanian Ambassador Gabriel Lewis has just concluded a quick correspondence course on how to win friends on Capitol Hill and influence their votes on the Panama Canal treaties.

He was instructed confidentially to court senators at "breakfast, lunch and dinner," to buy "a meal or two" for hungry reporters, to pass out contributions to the right senators and, above all, not to count on President Carter's inept lobbyists.

Ambassador Lewis sought the advice of a professional persuader, N.C. Livingstone, on what he could do to help persuade the Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaty. The ambassador got back a candid, five-page memo on the letterhead of Hill, Livingstone Associates, a Washington consulting firm.

Livingstone cautioned that the White House lobbyists, headed by the harassed Frank Moore, were babes in the legislative woods. "Few members of Frank Moore's congressional liaison staff at the White House have any real credibility or demonstrable expertise on Capitol Hill," Livingstone tipped off the ambassador. "To trust the White House to win ratification of the treaties is to take a severe risk."

Instead, the memo advised the Panamanians to "concentrate on good, old-fashioned flesh-pressing and shoe-leather diplomacy." Explained the memo: "Build personal ties and rapport with members of the Senate and their staffs. Court them at breakfast, lunch and dinner." In a sentence, Livingstone urged: "Live at the U.S. Senate for the next six months."

Another section of the memo, entitled "Persuasion by Contribution," offered this confidential advice: "Next year is an election year. Perhaps a dozen members of the Senate could be influenced by the promise of contributions or the threat to withhold such contributions. Prominent business and labor leaders could provide such pressure on key undecided members."

Perhaps as an afterthought about the Korean scandal, Livingstone added cautiously: "This is, to be sure, a sensitive matter, but it is in no way unusual in U.S. politics."

The memo included some instructions for manipulating the media. First, it recommended that the Panamanians "forget about the Washington Post and the New York Times." These eminent newspapers, explained Livingstone, "are already on your side."

Instead, he suggested that they concentrate on smaller papers whose Washington correspondents, he said, are often slighted. "Invite them personally to the embassy, grant them interviews, buy them a meal or two," he advised. Stressed the memo: "Most journalists from the smaller publications don't often get invitations of this kind."

As another effective tactic, Livingstone recommended that the Panamanians generate grass-roots pressure. This could be accomplished, he said, by recruiting businessmen and labor leaders to contact senators personally, by establishing close contacts with "key opinion-generators in each state" and by creating a citizens committee of "prominent Americans."

The committee, he suggested, should be "used as a vehicle to take out newspaper ads countering those placed in local newspapers by treaty opponents." He also had some advice on the advertising style: "The ads should be full-page, concise, attractive and composed with snappy journalism; no long-winded expositions."

Footnote: Livingstone told us he wrote the memo as a personal favor. "I haven't received a dime," he said, for his political primer. It was inadvertent, he explained, that the advice was written on his firm's stationery.

Unsung Writer: The conflict in South Africa between the white regime and the black race, between the authorities and the press, has exploded into the open. Out of the repression has risen a host of black heroes. Not the least of them is the martyred Steve Biko who died mysteriously in jail. Black newsmen have also been systematically harassed and suppressed.

But a white man, Donald Woods, is also a victim of the South African police state. For more than two decades, this courageous editor has fought for civil liberties in South Africa. He is now under virtual house arrest — banned from speaking to reporters or even issuing written statements.

His crime? He wrote a column called "My Friend Steve Biko."

Gun Mail: The most militant of the gun groups, the Citizen's Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, may have gone too far. It has sent out mail in the names of congressmen who never authorized it.

Two congressmen whose names were misused, Bob Walker and Bill Goodling, both Pennsylvania Republicans, are considering legal action against the committee. Walker has also complained to the Postal Service.

The gun group fired a shotgun blast of 600,000 letters across the country soliciting money. The envelopes bear the committee's name and trademark in large type. But in the address window, just above the recipient's address, is the statement that the letter is "from" a congressman.

The group's founder, promoter and executive director, Alan Gottlieb, was hot-tempered about the matter. He shouted; he threatened; he screamed. It was "an error by the mail house," he swore. Only one of the 600,000 letters misused a congressman's name, insisted Gottlieb. "Anyone who tells me anything different," he yelled, "is a liar."

Flood victims return home

FRANKLIN, Mo. (AP) — Flood waters receded in the mid-Missouri community of Franklin today, and residents who were evacuated Tuesday returned to their homes to begin the muddy task of cleaning up.

"People are trying to clean up while things are still wet. That way the mud is easier to get rid of," said Mayor Wayne Purvis, who said damage would likely approach $1 million.

As many as 175 of the town's 250 residents fled their homes Tuesday when 2 to 4 inches of rain fell on already soggy ground and sent Sulphur Creek, a Missouri River tributary, out of its banks. Many returned to their homes Tuesday night, but others stayed overnight with relatives and returned to start the cleanup this morning.

The forecast was for more showers across the state today, but Purvis said he was not overly concerned. "It would take another hard, fast rain to put us where we were yesterday," the mayor said.

Marijuana compromise near

WASHINGTON — A major revision of federal criminal laws, including a compromise formula to retain criminal penalties for possessing small amounts of marijauna, is near final action by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee scheduled another meeting this afternoon. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, DMass., co-sponsor of the bill, said only a few amendments remained to be considered before a final vote.

By an 11-2 vote Tuesday, the committee adopted a compromise worked out by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a supporter of decriminalization, and Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who believes marijuana smoking should continue to be a federal crime.

The vote wiped out last Thursday's action in which the committee approved a Bayh amendment removing federal criminal penalties for possession of less than an ounce of marijuana and substituting a $100 civil fine.

In its place, the panel approved criminal penalties up to $100 for first-time possession of less than 10 grams. The penalties would go up to a $500 fine and 30 days in jail for the third offense of possessing between 10 grams and an ounce.

In all cases the offense would be classified as a criminal act, but the offender would receive a summons, somewhat like a traffic ticket, instead of being arrested.

$4.16 million frees tycoon

AMSTRERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Dutch multimillionaire Maurits Caransa, freed unharmed by kidnappers early today, said he negotiated his own $4.16 million ransom.

The 61-year-old real estate tycoon told a news conference the four abductors who grabbed him last Friday were "out only for money" and first demanded 40 million guilders ($16.64 million) for his release.

"We bargained and came to the sum of 10 million guilders," he said. He said he wrote his board of directors Sunday afternoon and instructed them to get the money from the bank and arrange "a drop in the street."

Caransa, who controls hotels, real estate and other enterprises valued at more than $40 million, was put out of a car in downtown Amsterdam at 1:30 a.m. local time after a 45-60 minute ride from the "dark den" where he said he was held five days, handcuffed to a bed.

The tycoon told a passing woman who he was, and she put him in a taxi and sent it to police headquarters. He was reunited there with his wife, daughter and several friends. After a physical examination, an ambulance took him to his home in Vinkeveen, south of The Hague.

Carter plans radio-TV appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in a new move to solicit public support for his energy program, plans to make his first television-radio address to the nation in more than six months.

Rex Granum, the president's deputy press secretary, said the timing has not been fixed but can be expected "fairly soon," perhaps later this week.

There was speculation that Carter might take the occasion to discuss cancellation or postponement of his nine-nation tour scheduled to begin Nov. 22.

He has said several times he would change his travel plans if they threatened to interfere with congressional action on energy legislation.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said today "I don't think anybody knows yet" whether the trip will be scrapped or altered. He said any cancellation or postponement would be unfortunate.

Powell said the trip would fulfill the administration's goal of dramatizing increased interest in developing nations. And it would permit Carter to meet with leaders of four major oilproducing countries — Saudi Arabia, Iran, Nigeria and Venezuela — just prior to a major decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on increasing oil prices.

Brezhnev talks moratorium

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid Brezhnev opened the Soviet celebration of the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution with a proposal for a moratorium on all nuclear explosions, peaceful as well as military. It was the most far-reaching nuclear ban proposed so far. The nuclear powers opened talks Oct. 3 in Geneva on proposals to ban all nuclear tests, including those for peaceful purposes.

New crisis faces Trudeau

MONTREAL (AP) — Disclosure of illegal activities by anti-terrorist squads of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is creating a new crisis for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his Liberal government.

Allegations are mounting that RCMP undercover operations in the early 1970s were directed at the Parti Quebecois (PQ), labor unions and other legal groups as well as terrorists.

Kleindienst denies illegality

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst admits he received $125,000 to help California insurance man Joseph Hauser get a lucrative contract. But Kleindienst, testifying before a Senate subcomittee Tuesday, denied having any illegal role in the awarding of the $24 million Teamsters Union life insurance contract.

GOP to challenge change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are challenging what they call a "soak the businessman" approach as the full Senate gets ready to consider legislation to raise Social Security taxes.

The GOP objected to the Senate Finance Committee's vote Tuesday to end the tradition of employers and employees paying an equal share of payroll taxes to support the system.

Jobless rate in Missouri dips below 5%

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The unemployment rate in Missouri dropped below 5 percent in September despite the addition of nearly 10,000 workers to the state's labor force, the Division of Employment Security said.

The jobless rate for September stood at 4.8 percent of the state's 2.14 million-member work force. That compared to a 5.5 percent jobless rate in August when the work force was just more than 2.13 million.

September employment increases in government, transportation, services and manufacturing brought the total number of Missourians with jobs to nearly 2.04 million, the highest level of employment in the state in the last three months.

Job seekers totaled just more than 103,000, dropping from more than 117,000 the month before, the division said based on its latest estimates.

Of the five metropolitan areas of the state, St. Louis with a jobless rate of 5.6 percent, Kansas City with a rate of 5.2 percent and St. Joseph with a 5.7 percent rate all remained above the statewide average. Springfield with a 3.6 percent rate and Columbia with a 3.3 percent rate were again well below the rate for the state as a whole.

The highest unemployment rate for September was in Washington County in the eastern part of the state where 7.8 percent of the work force was without jobs. The lowest jobless rate of 1.9 percent was recorded in Clark County in the northeast corner of the state.

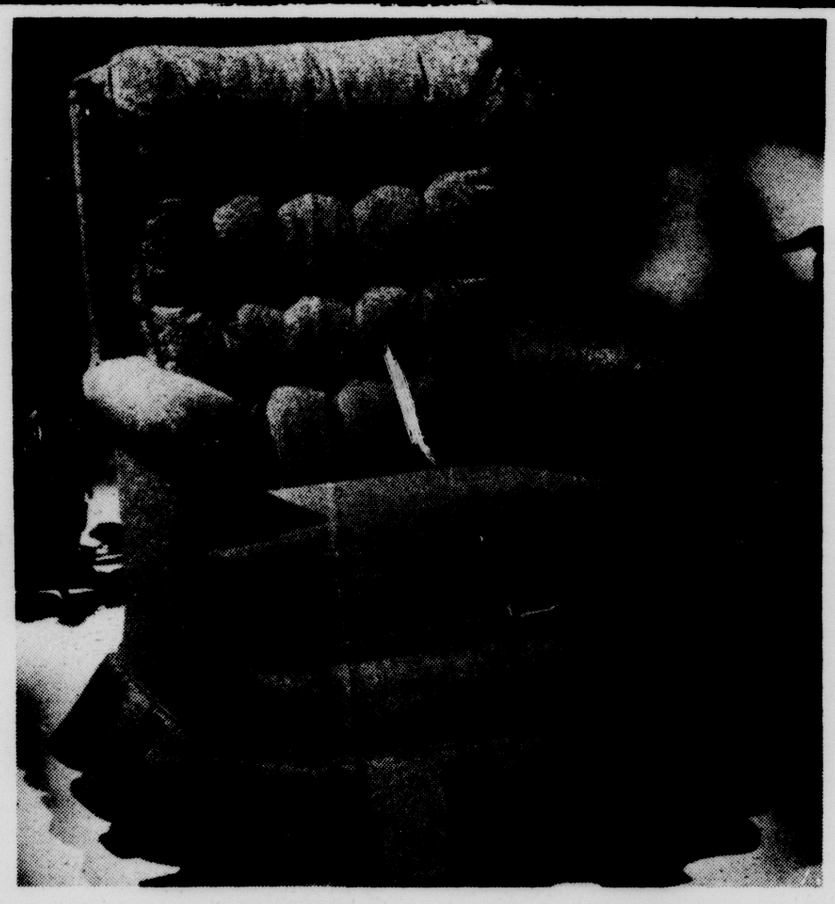

Uranium

Uranium is generally found in low-grade ores with about 0.2 per cent uranium content. The ores are crushed and the uranium chemically extracted and shipped as uranium oxide. The unused residues, called "mill tailings," are discarded. Natural uranium occurs in two varieties, or isotopies — U-238 and U-235.

Carter plans radio-TV appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, in a new move to solicit public support for his energy program, plans to make his first television-radio address to the nation in more than six months.

Rex Granum, the president's deputy press secretary, said the timing has not been fixed but can be expected "fairly soon," perhaps later this week.

There was speculation that Carter might take the occasion to discuss cancellation or postponement of his nine-nation tour scheduled to begin Nov. 22.

He has said several times he would change his travel plans if they threatened to interfere with congressional action on energy legislation.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said today "I don't think anybody knows yet" whether the trip will be scrapped or altered. He said any cancellation or postponement would be unfortunate.

Powell said the trip would fulfill the administration's goal of dramatizing increased interest in developing nations. And it would permit Carter to meet with leaders of four major oilproducing countries — Saudi Arabia, Iran, Nigeria and Venezuela — just prior to a major decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on increasing oil prices.

Brezhnev talks moratorium

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid Brezhnev opened the Soviet celebration of the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution with a proposal for a moratorium on all nuclear explosions, peaceful as well as military. It was the most far-reaching nuclear ban proposed so far. The nuclear powers opened talks Oct. 3 in Geneva on proposals to ban all nuclear tests, including those for peaceful purposes.

New crisis faces Trudeau

MONTREAL (AP) — Disclosure of illegal activities by anti-terrorist squads of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is creating a new crisis for Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his Liberal government.

Allegations are mounting that RCMP undercover operations in the early 1970s were directed at the Parti Quebecois (PQ), labor unions and other legal groups as well as terrorists.

Kleindienst denies illegality

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst admits he received $125,000 to help California insurance man Joseph Hauser get a lucrative contract. But Kleindienst, testifying before a Senate subcomittee Tuesday, denied having any illegal role in the awarding of the $24 million Teamsters Union life insurance contract.

GOP to challenge change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are challenging what they call a "soak the businessman" approach as the full Senate gets ready to consider legislation to raise Social Security taxes.

The GOP objected to the Senate Finance Committee's vote Tuesday to end the tradition of employers and employees paying an equal share of payroll taxes to support the system.

Jobless rate in Missouri dips below 5%

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The unemployment rate in Missouri dropped below 5 percent in September despite the addition of nearly 10,000 workers to the state's labor force, the Division of Employment Security said.

The jobless rate for September stood at 4.8 percent of the state's 2.14 million-member work force. That compared to a 5.5 percent jobless rate in August when the work force was just more than 2.13 million.

September employment increases in government, transportation, services and manufacturing brought the total number of Missourians with jobs to nearly 2.04 million, the highest level of employment in the state in the last three months.

Job seekers totaled just more than 103,000, dropping from more than 117,000 the month before, the division said based on its latest estimates.

Of the five metropolitan areas of the state, St. Louis with a jobless rate of 5.6 percent, Kansas City with a rate of 5.2 percent and St. Joseph with a 5.7 percent rate all remained above the statewide average. Springfield with a 3.6 percent rate and Columbia with a 3.3 percent rate were again well below the rate for the state as a whole.

The highest unemployment rate for September was in Washington County in the eastern part of the state where 7.8 percent of the work force was without jobs. The lowest jobless rate of 1.9 percent was recorded in Clark County in the northeast corner of the state.

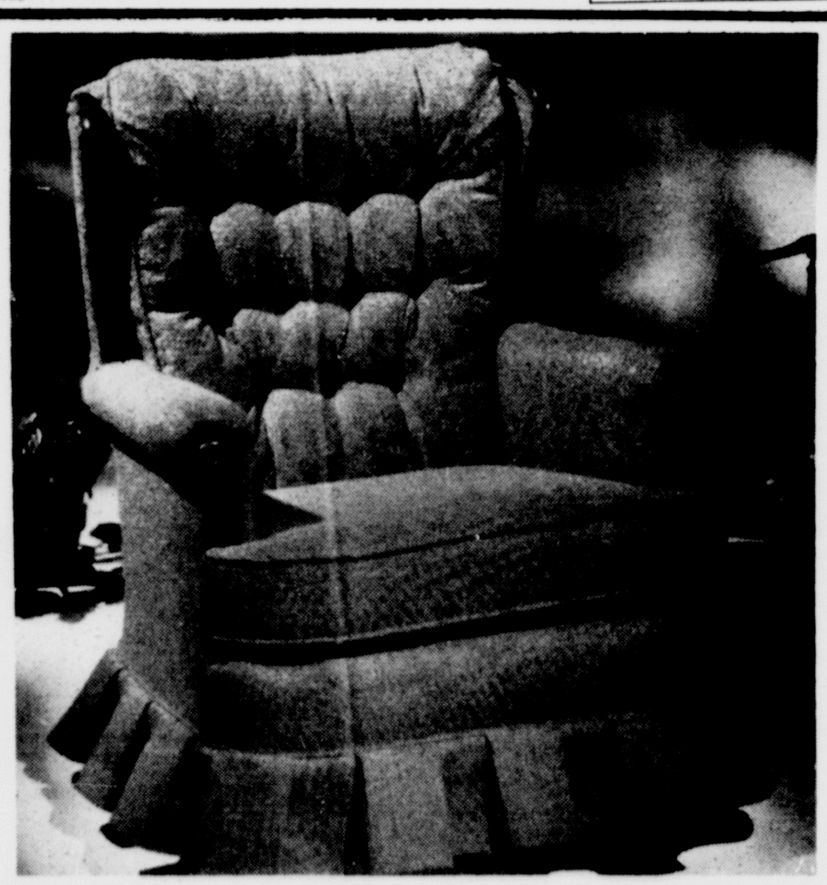

Uranium

Uranium is generally found in low-grade ores with about 0.2 per cent uranium content. The ores are crushed and the uranium chemically extracted and shipped as uranium oxide. The unused residues, called "mill tailings," are discarded. Natural uranium occurs in two varieties, or isotopies — U-238 and U-235.

Cooking up

By Cherie Blanton

I'm dieting and as a result my sweet tooth is working overtime so all the recipies I'm looking at that look good are rich and yummy, for instance.....

Butterscotch Cake

1 cup softened butter
2 eggs, room temperature
1 (3 oz.) pkg. instant butterscotch pudding mix.
2 cups flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 cup dark corn syrup
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. soda
1 cup sour cream

Cream butter and syrup until very light. Add eggs, then vanilla. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with sour cream to mixture. Beat well. Spoon into two 9 inch layer pans, greased and floured. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool for 10 minutes, then remove and ice with the following.

Chocolate Icing

2 (1 oz.) squares of unsweetened chocolate
3 egg whites
5 TBS. cold water
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
1½ cups sugar
1½ tsp. light corn syrup

Melt chocolate. Cook egg whites, water cream of tartar, sugar and syrup in a double boiler and beat with electric beater for seven minutes or till icing peaks. Remove, add vanilla and fold in cool melted chocolate.

Super Chocolate Cookies

2 (1 oz.) squares of unsweetened chocolate
1 can sweetened condense milk
1½ cups well crumbeled vanilla wafers
1 tsp. vanilla
1½ cups chopped pecans
½ tsp. salt

Melt chocolate. Add milk and wafers, pecans, salt and vanilla. Drop onto a greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes. Watch carefully to keep from burning. Makes 2½ dozen cookies.

Chess Cookies

1 cup butter
1 (16 oz.) pkg. dark brown sugar
2 cups flour
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup sugar
4 egg yolks
1 tsp. baking powder
1 cup chopped nuts
1½ tsp. vanilla
4 egg whites, stiff

Melt butter, add sugars and yolks and beat well. Add flour, baking powder and salt. Fold in nuts and vanilla, then add stiffly beaten egg whites. Spread in a greased 13 x 9 x 2 pan. Bake at 35. degrees for 30 to 40 minutes. Cool 20 minutes but leave in pan till completely cold.

Whiskey Sauce

½ cup butter
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup sugar
whiskey to taste

Cream butter and sugar and cook in top of a double boiler until very hot and thoroughly dissolved. Then add beaten egg and whip rapidly so egg does not curdle. Let cook and add whiskey.

Dear Ann Landers

Defenses makes heart grow fonder

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I decided that maybe you can help us. I am writing because she has been crying and her eyes are too swollen to see.

Last year our beautiful, intelligent daughter married a jerk. She had so many great guys running after her we can't figure out why she picked this loser. But that's over and done with. Now the current problem: Her younger sister has become romantically involved with the idiot's brother. He may be an even bigger jerk. At least the other one had four years of college. This clown quit after one year and is still trying to "find himself."

One character out of that family is enough. What can we do to discourage our second daughter from making this awful mistake? -- Pittsburgh

Dear Pitts: If you want to make sure both daughters have the same in-laws, just continue to knock the kid. Nothing makes a fellow quite so attractive to a girl as having to defend him against her parents.

Look hard and try to find something about the young man to admire. Then -- dwell on it. You'll be amazed at the change in her attitude when you change yours.

Dear Ann Landers: There was a big discussion at our house last night about drunken behavior -- also a lot of divided opinion. Will you please check with the authorities and give me the straight dope?

When people have had too much to drink do their true feelings come out? Or, do they say and do things that are uncharacteristic of the real person?

My uncle, for example, is a rather reserved man who usually keeps to himself. When he has had one too many (like a third martini) he becomes very talkative and even affectionate. (Actually, he is much more likeable when he's loaded.)

My aunt, on the other hand, is a lovely, pleasant, refined lady when she's sober, but when she drinks she becomes belligerent, nasty and downright mean.

What is the story on such behavior, Ann? -- Like To Know

Dear Like: Alcohol breaks down the inhibitions. When the booze goes to work the "censoring agent" takes a vacation.

Inebriated people say what is truly on their minds. Buried resentments surface. The language is unguarded. The behavior you see is the real person.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been happily married for two years. His son (now age 17) by his former marriage lives with his mother in a city about 40 miles from us. Johnny and I have always gotten along well -- no problem. Although I see plenty of room for improvement, I have never once criticized him -- either to his father or anyone else. We have let him know he is welcome to spend weekends with us but he has never shown much interest in doing so.

Johnny has a key to our home and this is what I'm writing about. Last week a neighbor told me that when my husband and I were in Wisconsin the boy and a pretty young girl and another couple spent the night at our place. This neighbor is not a gossip. Should I tell my husband? After all, I'm not the boy's mother. -- Don't Want Trouble

Dear D.W.T.: You may not be the boy's mother but the home is half yours and you should not supply a 17-year-old with such a cozy and convenient setup.

Tell your husband. He should ask Johnny to return the key but make it clear that he and his friends are welcome anytime -- when you're at home.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers's booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.LO. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Grandma's corner

By JILL CORTI

Today marks the final time that "Grandma" will speak words of wisdon to us all as Thursday brings a new day and a new Grandma.

With my recent appointment to the position as special Promotions and Features Editor at the Standard, Susie Payne will now become the women's page editor. Susie joined the staff in May following graduation from Ole Miss, so all you Rebels lend her a hand. I'm sure you will all enjoy her interesting witty ideas.

Many times over the past six months, I've heard comments about Grandma's Corner, wondering how the name came about. The article was written and dedicated to my Grandmother who I spent many treasured moments with while growing up, and also to my mother.

When I married, my mother and grandmother provided me with some treasures that contained old wives tales and tips in being a good housewife.

Today will be a repeat of the first Grandma's Corner.

Candles last longer if placed in the refrigerator for a few days before using. They hold thier shape better and burn slowly after this treatment.

Mini course on managing life and career will begin tonight

CAPE GIRARDEAU — "Managing Your Life and Your Carreer," a mini-course which is intended to be the first in a series of programs for women, will be offered at Southeast Missouri State University beginning tonight.

The mini-course will be conducted from 7-9 p.m. tonight, Nov. 9, and Nov. 16 in the University Center by Dr. Ada Cruce Mast, assistant professor of education at the university. Fee is $18 and enrollment is limited to 40.

Participants will not earn college credit, but will receive 0.6 continuing education units which will be kept on record at Southeast Missouri State. A continuing education unit is defined as one unit for each 10 contact hours of participation in an organized continuing education experience under responsible sponsorship, capable direction, and qualified instruction.

Clarification of values and personal relationships, analysis of individual abilities and interests, setting long and shortrange job goals, and setting self-development goals are among the objectives of "Managing Your Life and yur Career."

Dr. Willard J. Morgan, dean of continuing education at Southeast Missouri State, said the program is intended for persons in Cape Girardeau, Mississippi, Perry, and Scott Counties. Dr. Morgan also emphasized that the program is open to all women, not just those who work outside the home.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Dr. Morgan at Southeast Missouri State. His telephone number is 314-651-2189. Registration is also being handled by Dr. office.

New for Consumers

Drying foods at home

Some things that folks used to do in ancient times to preserve foods still work today. For thousands of years, people dried fruits, vegetables and even meat to preserve them for leaner times. Today drying is a good way to preserve seasonal favorites, and save space too.

How can you do it? To tell you the various methods, the equipment you need, and how to select the best fruits and vegetables for drying, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has a new booklet. For your copy of Drying Foods at Home, send 45 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept, 117E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Drying will not improve the quality of vegetables, so you must carefully select fresh and choice ones. To preserve the color and flavor, you should blanche the vegetables with hot water or steam. The drying procedure can be done right in your kitchen oven, Put the vegetables in single layers on trays. Although you can dry more than one kind of vegetables at a time, strong smelling vegetables should be dried separately.

Preheat the oven to 160 degrees and load the trays, keeping the oven door open at least 4 inches. Place a fan outside the oven to direct air through the opening and across the oven. Keep the oven temperature no higher than 140 degrees, and watch the drying vegetables closely to avoid scorching. Most vegetables will take from 2 to 5 hours, depending on their moisture level.

To make fruit rolls, also called fruit "leathers", select any type of ripe or overripe fruit, such as apricots, apples, grapes, or peaches. Remove the stones or pits; remove the peel if you wish; cut the fruit into chunks; and place it in a food chopper or blender. For light colored fruit, add one tablespoon of lemon or lime juice for each quart of fruit. Line a cookie sheet or tray with waxed paper and pour the blended fruit about ¼ inch deep. Set the oven to its lowest setting (140 degrees), and, leaving the oven door cracked open from two to six inches, the trays inside.

The fruit leather will be dried in 4 to 5 hours. Fruit leather makes a delicious snack, as is, or it can be made into a great beverage by adding 5 parts water to 1 part leather in a food blender.

Christmas toy buying season is coming

By Kay Neill, Area Child and Family Development Specialist

BENTON — Get ready... the toy season is coming. Yes, it's time again to make those Christmas gift-giving decisions. This season prepare yourself ahead of time. Toy commercials are flooding the television and other media. Be careful. Look closely at advertised items when you go to the store. Here are just a few simple suggestions that can make the holidays easier for you and your family.

Plan and write down how much you intend to spend on each child -- see if that amount falls within your budget.

Determine in which direction your child's interests have been developing over the year. What are some of your child's favorite things, hobbies, etc.?

Once you have given some consideration to the budget and to the child, try to shop early. Do some comparative shopping. Look around and price a specific toy at several places. Look for quality. Be cautious about the best sellers -- often they are over-priced. Lastly, consider the safety angle. Is there space available in your home for the size of toy you are considering? Check for sharp edges that may be dangerous. Does the toy or game require constant adult supervision?

Your holiday should be a more relaxed and enjoyable one by keeping these toy buying hints in mind this season.

Cooking up

By Cherie Blanton

I'm dieting and as a result my sweet tooth is working overtime so all the recipies I'm looking at that look good are rich and yummy, for instance.....

Butterscotch Cake

1 cup softened butter
2 eggs, room temperature
1 (3 oz.) pkg. instant butterscotch pudding mix.
2 cups flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 cup dark corn syrup
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. soda
1 cup sour cream

Cream butter and syrup until very light. Add eggs, then vanilla. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with sour cream to mixture. Beat well. Spoon into two 9 inch layer pans, greased and floured. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool for 10 minutes, then remove and ice with the following.

Chocolate Icing

2 (1 oz.) squares of unsweetened chocolate
3 egg whites
5 TBS. cold water
1 tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
1½ cups sugar
1½ tsp. light corn syrup

Melt chocolate. Cook egg whites, water cream of tartar, sugar and syrup in a double boiler and beat with electric beater for seven minutes or till icing peaks. Remove, add vanilla and fold in cool melted chocolate.

Super Chocolate Cookies

2 (1 oz.) squares of unsweetened chocolate
1 can sweetened condense milk
1½ cups well crumbeled vanilla wafers
1 tsp. vanilla
1½ cups chopped pecans
½ tsp. salt

Melt chocolate. Add milk and wafers, pecans, salt and vanilla. Drop onto a greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes. Watch carefully to keep from burning. Makes 2½ dozen cookies.

Chess Cookies

1 cup butter
1 (16 oz.) pkg. dark brown sugar
2 cups flour
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup sugar
4 egg yolks
1 tsp. baking powder
1 cup chopped nuts
1½ tsp. vanilla
4 egg whites, stiff

Melt butter, add sugars and yolks and beat well. Add flour, baking powder and salt. Fold in nuts and vanilla, then add stiffly beaten egg whites. Spread in a greased 13 x 9 x 2 pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes. Cool 20 minutes but leave in pan till completely cold.

Whiskey Sauce

½ cup butter
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup sugar
whiskey to taste

Cream butter and sugar and cook in top of a double boiler until very hot and thoroughly dissolved. Then add beaten egg and whip rapidly so egg does not curdle. Let cook and add whiskey.

Dear Ann Landers

Defenses makes heart grow fonder

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I decided that maybe you can help us. I am writing because she has been crying and her eyes are too swollen to see.

Last year our beautiful, intelligent daughter married a jerk. She had so many great guys running after her we can't figure out why she picked this loser. But that's over and done with. Now the current problem: Her younger sister has become romantically involved with the idiot's brother. He may be an even bigger jerk. At least the other one had four years of college. This clown quit after one year and is still trying to "find himself."

One character out of that family is enough. What can we do to discourage our second daughter from making this awful mistake? -- Pittsburgh

Dear Pitts: If you want to make sure both daughters have the same in-laws, just continue to knock the kid. Nothing makes a fellow quite so attractive to a girl as having to defend him against her parents.

Look hard and try to find something about the young man to admire. Then -- dwell on it. You'll be amazed at the change in her attitude when you change yours.

Dear Ann Landers: There was a big discussion at our house last night about drunken behavior -- also a lot of divided opinion. Will you please check with the authorities and give me the straight dope?

When people have had too much to drink do their true feelings come out? Or, do they say and do things that are uncharacteristic of the real person?

My uncle, for example, is a rather reserved man who usually keeps to himself. When he has had one too many (like a third martini) he becomes very talkative and even affectionate. (Actually, he is much more likeable when he's loaded.)

My aunt, on the other hand, is a lovely, pleasant, refined lady when she's sober, but when she drinks she becomes belligerent, nasty and downright mean.

What is the story on such behavior, Ann? -- Like To Know

Dear Like: Alcohol breaks down the inhibitions. When the booze goes to work the "censoring agent" takes a vacation.

Inebriated people say what is truly on their minds. Buried resentments surface. The language is unguarded. The behavior you see is the real person.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been happily married for two years. His son (now age 17) by his former marriage lives with his mother in a city about 40 miles from us. Johnny and I have always gotten along well -- no problem. Although I see plenty of room for improvement, I have never once criticized him -- either to his father or anyone else. We have let him know he is welcome to spend weekends with us but he has never shown much interest in doing so.

Johnny has a key to our home and this is what I'm writing about. Last week a neighbor told me that when my husband and I were in Wisconsin the boy and a pretty young girl and another couple spent the night at our place. This neighbor is not a gossip. Should I tell my husband? After all, I'm not the boy's mother. -- Don't Want Trouble

Dear D.W.T.: You may not be the boy's mother but the home is half yours and you should not supply a 17-year-old with such a cozy and convenient setup.

Tell your husband. He should ask Johnny to return the key but make it clear that he and his friends are welcome anytime -- when you're at home.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers's booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.LO. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Grandma's corner

By JILL CORTI

Today marks the final time that "Grandma" will speak words of wisdon to us all as Thursday brings a new day and a new Grandma.

With my recent appointment to the position as special Promotions and Features Editor at the Standard, Susie Payne will now become the women's page editor. Susie joined the staff in May following graduation from Ole Miss, so all you Rebels lend her a hand. I'm sure you will all enjoy her interesting witty ideas.

Many times over the past six months, I've heard comments about Grandma's Corner, wondering how the name came about. The article was written and dedicated to my Grandmother who I spent many treasured moments with while growing up, and also to my mother.

When I married, my mother and grandmother provided me with some treasures that contained old wives tales and tips in being a good housewife.

Today will be a repeat of the first Grandma's Corner.

Candles last longer if placed in the refrigerator for a few days before using. They hold thier shape better and burn slowly after this treatment.

Mini course on managing life and career will begin tonight

CAPE GIRARDEAU — "Managing Your Life and Your Carreer," a mini-course which is intended to be the first in a series of programs for women, will be offered at Southeast Missouri State University beginning tonight.

The mini-course will be conducted from 7-9 p.m. tonight, Nov. 9, and Nov. 16 in the University Center by Dr. Ada Cruce Mast, assistant professor of education at the university. Fee is $18 and enrollment is limited to 40.

Participants will not earn college credit, but will receive 0.6 continuing education units which will be kept on record at Southeast Missouri State. A continuing education unit is defined as one unit for each 10 contact hours of participation in an organized continuing education experience under responsible sponsorship, capable direction, and qualified instruction.

Clarification of values and personal relationships, analysis of individual abilities and interests, setting long and shortrange job goals, and setting self-development goals are among the objectives of "Managing Your Life and yur Career."

Dr. Willard J. Morgan, dean of continuing education at Southeast Missouri State, said the program is intended for persons in Cape Girardeau, Mississippi, Perry, and Scott Counties. Dr. Morgan also emphasized that the program is open to all women, not just those who work outside the home.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Dr. Morgan at Southeast Missouri State. His telephone number is 314-651-2189. Registration is also being handled by Dr. office.

New for Consumers

Drying foods at home

Some things that folks used to do in ancient times to preserve foods still work today. For thousands of years, people dried fruits, vegetables and even meat to preserve them for leaner times. Today drying is a good way to preserve seasonal favorites, and save space too.

How can you do it? To tell you the various methods, the equipment you need, and how to select the best fruits and vegetables for drying, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has a new booklet. For your copy of Drying Foods at Home, send 45 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept, 117E, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Drying will not improve the quality of vegetables, so you must carefully select fresh and choice ones. To preserve the color and flavor, you should blanche the vegetables with hot water or steam. The drying procedure can be done right in your kitchen oven, Put the vegetables in single layers on trays. Although you can dry more than one kind of vegetables at a time, strong smelling vegetables should be dried separately.

Preheat the oven to 160 degrees and load the trays, keeping the oven door open at least 4 inches. Place a fan outside the oven to direct air through the opening and across the oven. Keep the oven temperature no higher than 140 degrees, and watch the drying vegetables closely to avoid scorching. Most vegetables will take from 2 to 5 hours, depending on their moisture level.

To make fruit rolls, also called fruit "leathers", select any type of ripe or overripe fruit, such as apricots, apples, grapes, or peaches. Remove the stones or pits; remove the peel if you wish; cut the fruit into chunks; and place it in a food chopper or blender. For light colored fruit, add one tablespoon of lemon or lime juice for each quart of fruit. Line a cookie sheet or tray with waxed paper and pour the blended fruit about ¼ inch deep. Set the oven to its lowest setting (140 degrees), and, leaving the oven door cracked open from two to six inches, the trays inside.

The fruit leather will be dried in 4 to 5 hours. Fruit leather makes a delicious snack, as is, or it can be made into a great beverage by adding 5 parts water to 1 part leather in a food blender.

Christmas toy buying season is coming

By Kay Neill, Area Child and Family Development Specialist

BENTON — Get ready... the toy season is coming. Yes, it's time again to make those Christmas gift-giving decisions. This season prepare yourself ahead of time. Toy commercials are flooding the television and other media. Be careful. Look closely at advertised items when you go to the store. Here are just a few simple suggestions that can make the holidays easier for you and your family.

Plan and write down how much you intend to spend on each child -- see if that amount falls within your budget.

Determine in which direction your child's interests have been developing over the year. What are some of your child's favorite things, hobbies, etc.?

Once you have given some consideration to the budget and to the child, try to shop early. Do some comparative shopping. Look around and price a specific toy at several places. Look for quality. Be cautious about the best sellers -- often they are over-priced. Lastly, consider the safety angle. Is there space available in your home for the size of toy you are considering? Check for sharp edges that may be dangerous. Does the toy or game require constant adult supervision?

Your holiday should be a more relaxed and enjoyable one by keeping these toy buying hints in mind this season.

"We all Struggled Franticallv into our Clothes"

Benton's illustrations

Thomas Hart Benton's illustration from Mark Twain, titled "We all struggled frantically into our clothes."

Benton's illustrations to be displayed here

The exhibition, Thomas Hart Benton's Illustrations From Mark Twain, has been scheduled for showing at the Security Federal Savings and Loan Building, 820 North Main St., Jan. 22 through Feb. 19, 1978.

This exhibition will be open to the public and will be available for special showings to area clubs and organizations.

Comprising the exhibition are 150 selected original drawings by the noted Missouri artist Thomas Hart Benton. These were recently bequeathed by Benton to the State Hisotical Society of Missouri at Columbia, which has loaned them to the Mid-America Arts Alliance for a regional tour. Sikeston is one of the three stops in Missouri for this tour.

Shown together for the first time, this collection vividly brings to life Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer", "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," and "Life on the Mississippi." The works are executed in sepia ink, pen and ink, watercolor and crayon.

A mini-film festival accompanying the exhibition and scheduled to be shown also at Security Federal Building, includes two early film classics-- "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" (1938) and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" (1939) -- as well as the recently released and acclaimed film "Thomas Hart Benton's The Sources of Country Music," which depicts the creation of Benton's last mural by the same title.

The unity of contribution and effort among the Albrecht Art Museum, which organized the exhibition; the State Historical Society of Missouri; the Missouri Arts Council, in cooperation with its neighboring state arts agencies; the Mid-America Arts Alliance; the private sector and the National Endowment for the Arts, is making this touring exhibition possible.

Directors of writing programs protest

COLUMBIA — Directors of writing programs in Missouri's public colleges and universities have taken issue with the requirement that allows Missouri high school students to graduate with only one unit of English instruction.

Dr. Winifred Horner, director of the writing program in University of Missouri-Columbia's English Department, wants at least three units of English required for high school graduation.

Horner who said there is a dereasing ability of high school students to write, would like for the three units to consist of language, literature, and composition, with significant attention to writing.

The Missouri English director believes that the lower test score averages of incoming college freshmen can be partially attributed to the decision by the state board of Education in 1974 to require only a single unit of English.

Employment rises in area

JEFFERSON CITY — The Division of Employment Security announced Tuesday that employment increased in September, bringing in more than 23,000 additional workers in the state.

The estimated unemployment rate for Scott County for September was 4.7 per cent, compared to a 4.8 percent statewide rate.

The unemployment rate dropped between August and September for Missouri from 5.5 per cent to 4.8 per cent.

The September employment level was the highest registered in the last three months.

Mississippi County registered the highest unemployment record for this area with a 5.2 per cent level. Stoddard County had the lowest with 3.6 per cent.

New Madrid County reported an unemployment level of four per cent for September.

The number of persons employed throughout the state of Missouri stood at 2,142,700 for September. That total was up from 2,039,200 employed in August.

The Mid-September figure was 9,100 above the total for September 1976, despite the fact that 9,000 more job seekers joined the labor force.

New Kal Kan® Mealtime® has tail-waggin' taste from meat protein.™

Dogs love the taste of meat. So, new Mealtime is made with real meat protein. (35% of the protein in Mealtime comes from meat). That's why Mealtime tastes good, and is good for dogs.

Clean teeth, healthy gums.

Mealtime has a crunchy texture that gives dogs the chewing exercise they need for clean teeth and healthy gums.

More natural nutrition.

Mealtime is made with wheat products. Most other dog foods are made with corn. Because wheat has more natural nutrition, Mealtime needs fewer additives. (Compare our ingredient list with other brands). Dogs get the vitamins and minerals they need in a more natural formula.

The right bite size for your dog.

The appetizing red chunks and golden bone-shaped nuggets in Mealtime are available in two sizes: large crunchy bites for larger dogs and small crunchy bites for smaller dogs and puppies. So you and your dog have a choice.

Firm stools.

The unique formula of Mealtime promotes proper food utilization and digestion. This helps dogs produce a firmer stool.

See for yourself.

We say new Mealtime has tail-waggin' taste from meat protein. But don't take our word for it. Get some for your dog, and let his tail tell its own story.

Bell City debut Two upsets mark

BELL CITY — Speedings don't mean that much in the first tournament of the season, especially when it involves junior varsity teams. Scott Central lived up to its pre-tournament billing last night, but Puxico and Delta didn't as the Bell City B Team Tournament got under way, inaugurating the southeast Missouri high school basketball season.

The top-seeded Braves scrapped, rebounded and shot their way to a 74-35 win over Bloomfield in the opener of the eight-team meet. Kelly followed with a thriller 68-66 triumph over fourth-seeded delta, and Oran followed by surprising second-rated Puxico 59-52.

Mayfield Timmons spun home 20 points for Scott Central as they walked past the Wildcats into Thursday night's semifinals against Kelly. The Braves pressed early and forced the shorter Bloomfield club into early mistakes that shot Scott Central into a 19-5 opening period lead. The Braves cruised home from there, adding 18, 22 and 15 points to complete the rout.

Kevin Bowling scored 12 to lead Bloomfield's losing cause.

Kelly came from behind in the fourth quarter to overcome a two-point deficit going in and defeat Delta. The bobcats built up a seven-point lead after the opening quarter, but the Hawks whittled away and cut it to a pair to set the stage for the exciting final period.

The Hawks featured three big scoring threats, with David Harper leading the way with 16 points. Wendell Kirkpatrick added 15 and David Yant throwing in 14. Kevin Shrum scored 19 and Troy Smith 16 for Delta.

Oran outscored Puxico 18-9 in the third period to build up a 14-point lead and held to on win by seven , earning the right to play Thursday's Bell City-Advance winner Friday evening.

Balance was the name of the game for the Eagles, with Tom Seyer throwing in 16 markers to lead the way. Bill Anderson scored 13 and Gary Reischmann and Mike Black added 12 a apiece. Jeff Smith blistered the nets for 20 points to top Puxico.

After a night off tonight, action resumes Thursday evening. Bell City and Advance close out opening-round play with a 6:00 p.m. encounter, which will be followed by the semifinal meeting between Scott Central and Kelly. Bloomfield and Delta meet in a consolation bracket game at 9:00 p.m.

Steve Carlton tabbed for Cy Young honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Carlton, the left-hander who parlayed power and finesse into 23 victories for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1977, was named winner of the Cy Young Award today as the National League's outstanding pitcher.

It was the second time Carlton has won the honor, awarded annually to the outstanding pitcher in each league after a vote of a committee of members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, two from each league city. He also won it in 1972.

Carlton, the major leagues' winningest pitcher who compiled a 23-10 record in leading the Phillies to the East Division title, was an easy winner in the Cy Young balloting, receiving 17 of 24 first-place votes and 104 points.

Tommy John of the West Division champion Los Angeles Dodgers was second with 54 points, including three firstplace votes. Tom Seaver of Cincinnati and Rick Reuschel of Chicago tied for third with 18 points each, Seaver getting two first-place votes and Reuschel one.

Others receiving votes were Pittsburgh's John Candelaria, 17 points and one first-place mention, and Chicago's Bruce Sutter, a relief pitcher, five points.

Five points are awarded for a first-place vote, three for a second and one for a third.

The American League Cy Young Award winner, announced last week, was relief pitcher Sparky Lyle of the world champion New York Yankees.

The 32-year-old Carlton is the sixth pitcher in baseball history to win the Cy Young Award more than once. Seaver, Sandy Koufax and Jim Palmer, each have won it three times, Bob Gibson won it twice and Denny McLain won it once and shared it once. The award was instituted in 1956, and in 1967 the baseball writers began making separate awards for each league.

Carlton is currently on a three-week hunting expedition in British Columbia, Canada, a spokesman for the Phillies said.

Phils Manager Danny Ozark, from his home in Vero Beach, Fla., said he felt Carlton would get the award "from September on. He was pitching that well. He won some big games for me."

After winning 27 games in 1972, Carlton tailed off to three mediocre seasons — 13-20, 16-13, 15-14 — in Ozark's first three years as manager of the Phils. But last year he bounced back to 20-7, and he topped that this summer.

Ozark attributes the comeback to the Phils' reacquisition late in 1975 of veteran Tim McCarver, who has become Carlton's designated catcher.

As his designated catcher, McCarver was perhaps more familiar with Carlton's moundwork than anyone else.

"The big guy used to overpower the hitters with that hopping fast ball," he said. "Now he still overpowers them, but he also gets them out with finesse. It makes no difference what he throws. He can get them all over the plate, and that's why he's such a great pitcher."

NO RESEMBLANCE INTENDED

Frogfish, batfish and goosefish are strange names for some strange fish.

None of them look anything like their namesakes. Yet they all have things in common.

One is that they are famous eaters, with lots of teeth.

Frogfish, for example, have rows of conical-shaped teeth which begin at the jaws and extend back into the mouth, including teeth on the tongue.

They are voracious predators and will eat almost anything small enough to get into their mouths. Fortunately, frogfish don't grow larger than six inches long.

A goosefish is a different story. It has a large, flat head with an enormous toothfilled mouth, and grows to weigh 50 pounds.

Its favorite foods include most other species of fish, all kinds of sea birds, plus lobsters and crabs for dessert.

While freshwater anglers will never see these odd fish species, the fishing department at Mercury outboards says that saltwater anglers are likely to catch all three since they do live in coastal waters.

Goosefish range from Newfoundland south, while batfish and frogfish are found in tropical waters of both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Perhaps the strangest of the trio is the batfish. Seldom more than 12 inches long, it has a broad body, and flat head with a long snout.

Instead of swimming through the water, the batfish uses arms, actually its long pelvic and pectoral fins, to move along the bottom.

These are three of the strangest fish in the sea, all named after other forms of life which they don't resemble.

Unger hat trick helps Blues win 1st

ST. LOUIS (AP) — On the theory that nothing could go wrong which hadn't already, Garry Unger chose to relax and enjoy himself in the National Hockey League Tuesday night.

The Los Angeles Kings wish he hadn't. Unger, the most prolific scorer in St. Louis history, made his formula pay off with a three-goal burst that sent the Blues to their first victory of the season.

"I just figured, 'Well, why not? Everything else hasn't worked. We might as well try the old style,'" said Unger, who scored on his first three of five shots to trigger St. Louis' 7-2 triumph.

"We'd been skating around all over the place. By the time I got the puck, I was too tired to do anything with it. Tonight, I just figured I'd shoot and to heck with the extra play."

The Blues, who had been saddled with their longest seasonopening drought in 11 NHL seasons, also capitalized on close checking to end their winless skid at nine games.

Unger scored at the 90-second mark on linemate Bill Fairbairn's pass. Then, after the Kings tied on Butch Goring's pass, Unger moved St. Louis in front to stay at 2-1.

"We'd been making so many bad plays on 2-on-1 and 3-on-1 breaks I just decided, 'Well, here's a chance to do something,'" Unger said of his third goal, a breakaway set up by Rick Bourbonnais in the middle period.

"It's been tough," he said of the Blues' discouraging slump, "but the guys have been sticking together. Nobody's been on anybody's back. This could be a start."

BACK — Greg King, running back, Army, rushed for 212 yards on 19 carries as the Cadets crushed Holy Cross 48-7, including a 97-yard gallop in the third period that broke a 54-year-old school record. King also tallied on the 16-yard run in the fourth period as Army boosted its record to 5-3 for the first time since 1968.

LINEMAN — Ron Simmons, nose guard, Florida State University, made 10 solo tackles, assisted on nine others and forced a fumble in leading the Seminoles to a 35-14 victory over North Texas State. Simmons, a 220-pound freshman from Warner Robins, Ga., sacked the quarterback five times for 51 yards in losses. For the season he has 20 tackles for losses of 101 yards, including 13 sacks.

O.J. out for '77; future in doubt

BUFFALO (AP) — A depressed O.J. Simpson said four weeks ago that "it will take a miracle" for him to achieve his greatest goal — to play in a Super Bowl.

His Buffalo Bills teammates think that miracle may have come in the form of an injured knee.

After the Bills' humiliating 56-17 loss to the seattle Seahawks Sunday, Simpson's left knee, ailing for three weeks, was examined by two Los Angeles specialists. Tuesday the Bills announced that Simpson will undergo surgery for cartilage damage early next week and will miss the remainder of the season.

Some of his teammates feel he has played his last game as a Bill, but may turn up in the uniform of a National Football League contender next season.

"Luckily the injury wasn't a serious thing. It won't end his career," said Joe DeLamielleure, an All-Pro lineman and a team leader.

DeLamielleure noted that it's no secret Simpson would welcome a trade to a contender and that Simpson might be more excited about coming back next season if he were traded.

"I see no reason why they should keep him. It's going to be a rebuilding process here that's going to take a few years. He deserves a chance to play in a Super Bowl. We'd all like to see it," he said.

Reggie McKenzie, offensive lineman and a close friend of Simpson, indicated on his morning radio show that Simpson would not return as a Bill.

Wide receiver Bobby Chandler said, "There is a feeling that he might not be back, but nothing was said as such. But the definite feeling is there."

Last season Simpson asked for a trade to the West Coast, preferably the Los Angeles Rams, but the Bills' asking price was reportedly too high. Simpson signed a three-year contract, then began simmering as the Bills finished 2-12 last year and lost six of their first seven games this season.

Before the Seattle game Simpson said he was more frustrated than at any point in his career and offered another round of criticism aimed at the Bills' management, which he said has not helped the team through trades.

Four move into net quarterfinals

ESSEX — All four seeded advanced into the quarterfinals with no problem Tuesday night as action continued in the District Ten Volleyball Tournament at Richland High School.

Dexter, which had defeated Chaffee in a preliminary game Monday night, was no match for top-seeded Richland as they fell 15-5 and 15-6.

In other action, eighth-seeded Zalma topped Matthews 15-11 and 15-6, number five Leopold dumped Oak Ridge 15-4 and 15-8 and number four Cape Central downed Puxico 19-17 and 15-8.

Tonight's play finds seventh-seeded East Prairie meeting Scott Central at 5:30 with second-seeded Advance taking on University High at 6:15. Illmo-Scott City plays Bell City at 7:00, and Sikeston meets third seeded Bloomfield at 7:45.

Quarterfinals are set for Thursday night, semifinals for Friday evening and finals for Saturday.

Time Out

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

Being a sportswriter is great.

It is a job that gives the sports addict the chance to be involved with what he loves to the extent that no normal fan can be. It is a job that allows a person to get paid for doing what most people have to pay to do. It is a job that enables a person to meet and talk to people that most fans will never have the chance to encounter.

For those of us who truly love sports and who make our living by reporting on them, we never grow tired of them.

Most sportswriters do what they do for a living because they enjoy it. The financial rewards involved are minimal, except for those relatively few who can make it into sports journalism in the major market (large daily papers and large magazines). The Jim Murray's, Will Grimsley's and Bob Broeg's pull in their share of the payroll, of course. But for most of us, it is a labor of love. Like teachers and policemen, small-town sportswriters do it because they like it.

Recent added financialresponsibilities(to but it bluntly, I got married) have made the requirements of life harder to come by these days. I don't love my work any less now than I have ever loved it. But you can't eat love for breakfast. The mercenary in me has prompted me to look for a means of employment where there is more of a future for monetary compensation. Practicality has won out over love.

Today marks my last day as sports editor of the Daily Standard. Of course, this will also be the last you hear from this reporter in "Time Out".

As I sit composing my final personal column as a sportswriter words don't come easily. I would rather avoid a tear-jerker of a piece, an emotional farewell to over three years of my life as a reporter. But still, a bit of sentimentality will probably creep into the keys of this Royal typewriter that resides at the station at the far side of the Daily Standard newsroom--the sports desk.

My thank-yous will be few: To Barney Miller at Dexter for giving me a start; to Ron Jaynes for hiring me here at the Standard; to Tony Pippen, Charles Blanton III and Allen Blanton for having the faith in me to make me sports editor when the vacancy arose two years ago last month; to the fine men I have worked with in the sports department for the past 27 months; to all those here at the paper who have made this job easier for me; and to all those coaches and others I have associted with who have been helpful.

Beginning Thursday, the sports editorship will pass into the capable hands of Dale Forbis--no stranger to the readers of the sports section. He will be assisted by Mike Marsh, who joined the staff in May and who has shown the potential to be an outstanding writer, and David Ziegenhorn, a recent graduate of Ole Miss, who has lent his knowledge and writing skills to the Standard in times past and who has helped out without pay this football season.

Leaving the Standard and taking a new job will be especially difficult for me, since it will mean leaving Sikeston and southeast Missouri. I've lived here practically all my life. Somehow, southern Illinois will seem like a foreign country to me.

But a new job and a new home won't change my attitude toward sports. I may still be living in Illinois 20 years from now, but the Bulldogs will still be my team.

And I'm sure that when I look back on the past three years 20 years from now, my memories will be fond ones.

It's been a lot of fun.

Bell City debut Two upsets mark

BELL CITY — Speedings don't mean that much in the first tournament of the season, especially when it involves junior varsity teams. Scott Central lived up to its pre-tournament billing last night, but Puxico and Delta didn't as the Bell City B Team Tournament got under way, inaugurating the southeast Missouri high school basketball season.

The top-seeded Braves scrapped, rebounded and shot their way to a 74-35 win over Bloomfield in the opener of the eight-team meet. Kelly followed with a thriller 68-66 triumph over fourth-seeded delta, and Oran followed by surprising second-rated Puxico 59-52.

Mayfield Timmons spun home 20 points for Scott Central as they walked past the Wildcats into Thursday night's semifinals against Kelly. The Braves pressed early and forced the shorter Bloomfield club into early mistakes that shot Scott Central into a 19-5 opening period lead. The Braves cruised home from there, adding 18, 22 and 15 points to complete the rout.

Kevin Bowling scored 12 to lead Bloomfield's losing cause.

Kelly came from behind in the fourth quarter to overcome a two-point deficit going in and defeat Delta. The bobcats built up a seven-point lead after the opening quarter, but the Hawks whittled away and cut it to a pair to set the stage for the exciting final period.

The Hawks featured three big scoring threats, with David Harper leading the way with 16 points. Wendell Kirkpatrick added 15 and David Yant throwing in 14. Kevin Shrum scored 19 and Troy Smith 16 for Delta.

Oran outscored Puxico 18-9 in the third period to build up a 14-point lead and held to on win by seven , earning the right to play Thursday's Bell City-Advance winner Friday evening.

Balance was the name of the game for the Eagles, with Tom Seyer throwing in 16 markers to lead the way. Bill Anderson scored 13 and Gary Reischmann and Mike Black added 12 a apiece. Jeff Smith blistered the nets for 20 points to top Puxico.

After a night off tonight, action resumes Thursday evening. Bell City and Advance close out opening-round play with a 6:00 p.m. encounter, which will be followed by the semifinal meeting between Scott Central and Kelly. Bloomfield and Delta meet in a consolation bracket game at 9:00 p.m.

Steve Carlton tabbed for Cy Young honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Carlton, the left-hander who parlayed power and finesse into 23 victories for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1977, was named winner of the Cy Young Award today as the National League's outstanding pitcher.

It was the second time Carlton has won the honor, awarded annually to the outstanding pitcher in each league after a vote of a committee of members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, two from each league city. He also won it in 1972.

Carlton, the major leagues' winningest pitcher who compiled a 23-10 record in leading the Phillies to the East Division title, was an easy winner in the Cy Young balloting, receiving 17 of 24 first-place votes and 104 points.

Tommy John of the West Division champion Los Angeles Dodgers was second with 54 points, including three firstplace votes. Tom Seaver of Cincinnati and Rick Reuschel of Chicago tied for third with 18 points each, Seaver getting two first-place votes and Reuschel one.

Others receiving votes were Pittsburgh's John Candelaria, 17 points and one first-place mention, and Chicago's Bruce Sutter, a relief pitcher, five points.

Five points are awarded for a first-place vote, three for a second and one for a third.

The American League Cy Young Award winner, announced last week, was relief pitcher Sparky Lyle of the world champion New York Yankees.

The 32-year-old Carlton is the sixth pitcher in baseball history to win the Cy Young Award more than once. Seaver, Sandy Koufax and Jim Palmer, each have won it three times, Bob Gibson won it twice and Denny McLain won it once and shared it once. The award was instituted in 1956, and in 1967 the baseball writers began making separate awards for each league.

Carlton is currently on a three-week hunting expedition in British Columbia, Canada, a spokesman for the Phillies said.

Phils Manager Danny Ozark, from his home in Vero Beach, Fla., said he felt Carlton would get the award "from September on. He was pitching that well. He won some big games for me."

After winning 27 games in 1972, Carlton tailed off to three mediocre seasons — 13-20, 16-13, 15-14 — in Ozark's first three years as manager of the Phils. But last year he bounced back to 20-7, and he topped that this summer.

Ozark attributes the comeback to the Phils' reacquisition late in 1975 of veteran Tim McCarver, who has become Carlton's designated catcher.

As his designated catcher, McCarver was perhaps more familiar with Carlton's moundwork than anyone else.

"The big guy used to overpower the hitters with that hopping fast ball," he said. "Now he still overpowers them, but he also gets them out with finesse. It makes no difference what he throws. He can get them all over the plate, and that's why he's such a great pitcher."

NO RESEMBLANCE INTENDED

Frogfish, batfish and goosefish are strange names for some strange fish.

None of them look anything like their namesakes. Yet they all have things in common.

One is that they are famous eaters, with lots of teeth.

Frogfish, for example, have rows of conical-shaped teeth which begin at the jaws and extend back into the mouth, including teeth on the tongue.

They are voracious predators and will eat almost anything small enough to get into their mouths. Fortunately, frogfish don't grow larger than six inches long.

A goosefish is a different story. It has a large, flat head with an enormous toothfilled mouth, and grows to weigh 50 pounds.

Its favorite foods include most other species of fish, all kinds of sea birds, plus lobsters and crabs for dessert.

While freshwater anglers will never see these odd fish species, the fishing department at Mercury outboards says that saltwater anglers are likely to catch all three since they do live in coastal waters.

Goosefish range from Newfoundland south, while batfish and frogfish are found in tropical waters of both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Perhaps the strangest of the trio is the batfish. Seldom more than 12 inches long, it has a broad body, and flat head with a long snout.

Instead of swimming through the water, the batfish uses arms, actually its long pelvic and pectoral fins, to move along the bottom.

These are three of the strangest fish in the sea, all named after other forms of life which they don't resemble.

Unger hat trick helps Blues win 1st

ST. LOUIS (AP) — On the theory that nothing could go wrong which hadn't already, Garry Unger chose to relax and enjoy himself in the National Hockey League Tuesday night.

The Los Angeles Kings wish he hadn't. Unger, the most prolific scorer in St. Louis history, made his formula pay off with a three-goal burst that sent the Blues to their first victory of the season.

"I just figured, 'Well, why not? Everything else hasn't worked. We might as well try the old style,'" said Unger, who scored on his first three of five shots to trigger St. Louis' 7-2 triumph.

"We'd been skating around all over the place. By the time I got the puck, I was too tired to do anything with it. Tonight, I just figured I'd shoot and to heck with the extra play."

The Blues, who had been saddled with their longest seasonopening drought in 11 NHL seasons, also capitalized on close checking to end their winless skid at nine games.

Unger scored at the 90-second mark on linemate Bill Fairbairn's pass. Then, after the Kings tied on Butch Goring's pass, Unger moved St. Louis in front to stay at 2-1.

"We'd been making so many bad plays on 2-on-1 and 3-on-1 breaks I just decided, 'Well, here's a chance to do something,'" Unger said of his third goal, a breakaway set up by Rick Bourbonnais in the middle period.

"It's been tough," he said of the Blues' discouraging slump, "but the guys have been sticking together. Nobody's been on anybody's back. This could be a start."

O.J. out for '77; future in doubt

BUFFALO (AP) — A depressed O.J. Simpson said four weeks ago that "it will take a miracle" for him to achieve his greatest goal — to play in a Super Bowl.

His Buffalo Bills teammates think that miracle may have come in the form of an injured knee.

After the Bills' humiliating 56-17 loss to the seattle Seahawks Sunday, Simpson's left knee, ailing for three weeks, was examined by two Los Angeles specialists. Tuesday the Bills announced that Simpson will undergo surgery for cartilage damage early next week and will miss the remainder of the season.

Some of his teammates feel he has played his last game as a Bill, but may turn up in the uniform of a National Football League contender next season.

"Luckily the injury wasn't a serious thing. It won't end his career," said Joe DeLamielleure, an All-Pro lineman and a team leader.

DeLamielleure noted that it's no secret Simpson would welcome a trade to a contender and that Simpson might be more excited about coming back next season if he were traded.

"I see no reason why they should keep him. It's going to be a rebuilding process here that's going to take a few years. He deserves a chance to play in a Super Bowl. We'd all like to see it," he said.

Reggie McKenzie, offensive lineman and a close friend of Simpson, indicated on his morning radio show that Simpson would not return as a Bill.

Wide receiver Bobby Chandler said, "There is a feeling that he might not be back, but nothing was said as such. But the definite feeling is there."

Last season Simpson asked for a trade to the West Coast, preferably the Los Angeles Rams, but the Bills' asking price was reportedly too high. Simpson signed a three-year contract, then began simmering as the Bills finished 2-12 last year and lost six of their first seven games this season.

Before the Seattle game Simpson said he was more frustrated than at any point in his career and offered another round of criticism aimed at the Bills' management, which he said has not helped the team through trades.

By The Associated Press
BACK — Greg King, running back, Army, rushed for 212 yards on 19 carries as the Cadets crushed Holy Cross 48-7, including a 97-yard gallop in the third period that broke a 54-year-old school record. King also tallied on the 16-yard run in the fourth period as Army boosted its record to 5-3 for the first time since 1968.

LINEMAN — Ron Simmons, nose guard, Florida State University, made 10 solo tackles, assisted on nine others and forced a fumble in leading the Seminoles to a 35-14 victory over North Texas State. Simmons, a 220-pound freshman from Warner Robins, Ga., sacked the quarterback five times for 51 yards in losses. For the season he has 20 tackles for losses of 101 yards, including 13 sacks.

Lobbying for the Treaties

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON – Panamanian Ambassador Gabriel Lewis has just concluded a quick correspondence course on how to win friends on Capitol Hill and influence their votes on the Panama Canal treaties.

He was instructed confidentially to court senators at "breakfast, lunch and dinner," to buy "a meal or two" for hungry reporters, to pass out contributions to the right senators and, above all, not to count on President Carter's inept lobbyists.

Ambassador Lewis sought the advice of a professional persuader, N.C. Livingstone, on what he could do to help persuade the Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaty. The ambassador got back a candid, five-page memo on the letterhead of Hill, Livingstone Associates, a Washington consulting firm.

Livingstone cautioned that the White House lobbyists, headed by the harassed Frank Moore, were babes in the legislative woods. "Few members of Frank Moore's congressional liaison staff at the White House have any real credibility or demonstrable expertise on Capitol Hill," Livingstone tipped off the ambassador. "To trust the White House to win ratification of the treaties is to take a severe risk."

Instead, the memo advised the Panamanians to "concentrate on good, old-fashioned flesh-pressing and shoe-leather diplomacy." Explained the memo: "Build personal ties and rapport with members of the Senate and their staffs. Court them at breakfast, lunch and dinner." In a sentence, Livingstone urged: "Live at the U.S. Senate for the next six months."

Another section of the memo, entitled "Persuasion by Contribution," offered this confidential advice: "Next year is an election year. Perhaps a dozen members of the Senate could be influenced by the promise of contributions or the threat to withhold such contributions. Prominent business and labor leaders could provide such pressure on key undecided members."

Perhaps as an afterthought about the Korean scandal, Livingstone added cautiously: "This is, to be sure, a sensitive matter, but it is in no way unusual in U.S. politics."

The memo included some instructions for manipulating the media. First, it recommended that the Panamanians "forget about the Washington Post and the New York Times." These eminent newspapers, explained Livingstone, "are already on your side."

Instead, he suggested that they concentrate on smaller papers whose Washington correspondents, he said, are often slighted. "Invite them personally to the embassy, grant them interviews, buy them a meal or two," he advised. Stressed the memo: "Most journalists from the smaller publications don't often get invitations of this kind."

As another effective tactic, Livingstone recommended that the Panamanians generate grass-roots pressure. This could be accomplished, he said, by recruiting businessmen and labor leaders to contact senators personally, by establishing close contacts with "key opinion-generators in each state" and by creating a citizens committee of "prominent Americans."

The committee, he suggested, should be "used as a vehicle to take out newspaper ads countering those placed in local newspapers by treaty opponents." He also had some advice on the advertising style: "The ads should be full-page, concise, attractive and composed with snappy journalism; no long-winded expositions."

Footnote: Livingstone told us he wrote the memo as a personal favor. "I haven't received a dime," he said, for his political primer. It was inadvertent, he explained, that the advice was written on his firm's stationery.

Unsung Writer: The conflict in South Africa between the white regime and the black race, between the authorities and the press, has exploded into the open. Out of the repression has risen a host of black heroes. Not the least of them is the martyred Steve Biko who died mysteriously in jail. Black newsmen have also been systematically harassed and suppressed.

But a white man, Donald Woods, is also a victim of the South African police state. For more than two decades, this courageous editor has fought for civil liberties in South Africa. He is now under virtual house arrest – banned from speaking to reporters or even issuing written statements.

His crime? He wrote a column called "My Friend Steve Biko."

Gun Mail: The most militant of the gun groups, the Citizen's Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, may have gone too far. It has sent out mail in the names of congressmen who never authorized it.

Two congressmen whose names were misused, Bob Walker and Bill Goodling, both Pennsylvania Republicans, are considering legal action against the committee. Walker has also complained to the Postal Service.

The gun group fired a shotgun blast of 600,000 letters across the country soliciting money. The envelopes bear the committee's name and trademark in large type. But in the address window, just above the recipient's address, is the statement that the letter is "from" a congressman.

The group's founder, promoter and executive director, Alan Gottlieb, was hot-tempered about the matter. He shouted; he threatened; he screamed. It was "an error by the mail house," he swore. Only one of the 600,000 letters misused a congressman's name, insisted Gottlieb. "Anyone who tells me anything different," he yelled, "is a liar."

Moderate food price rise expected through mid-'78

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is predicting moderately rising retail food prices through mid-1978 and attributing the primary cause to rising costs of processing and marketing.

The Outlook and Situation Board's figures, combined with Economic Research Service reports, indicate that most of that push from the so-called middleman sector is occuring now and will continue through the yearend holidays.

Government economists are now predicting that the food-price averages for all of 1977 will be about 6.7 percent higher than the averages last year, which recorded the lowest hike in food prices in nine years.

The increase is due about equally to sharp hikes in the prices of foreign foods, notably coffee, and rising marketing and retailing costs, especially wages and fuel, they say. Prices U.S. farmers receive for the raw ingredients have been even or down.

By next spring, USDA's outlook board says, price levels should be about 1.5 percent higher than this fall's averages, 2.16 percent above this past summer and almost 3.6 percent ahead of last spring.

Farm price average by then could be almost 6 percent below last spring, it said.

The biggest quarterly jump is expected between winter and spring, when the greatest movement of beef to slaughter in recent decades starts to drop off — if it does.

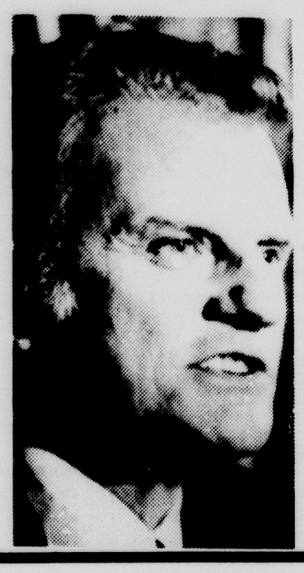

In terms of the USDA's hypothetical marketbasket of more than 60 U.S. farm-produced foods for an urban wageearning family of four, the board listed an annual grocery bill of $1,895 for 1976, $1,939 for 1977 and a spending rate next spring that would work out to $1,995 a year.

Last year, prices of food at restaurants and other eateries rose three times as fast as grocery prices. The board's tables forecast a similar pattern into 1978: grocery prices up 1 percent between now and the spring quarter; eating-out prices up almost 3 percent.

The board said that farmers are now getting about 38 cents from each consumer food dollar, 2 cents below 1976. It forecast another penny more to others in the food chain early in the year, but a return to 38 cents in the spring.

The ERS, which collects and analyzes the marketbasket figures, said the farmer's share in September was 38.3 cents, compared to 38.8 both a month before and a year ago.

The marketbasket does not reflect coffee or other imported foods, but the overall food-price projections do.

EVANGELIST Billy Graham says he expects to disclose his organization's financial situation by the end of the year. The move is in response to criticism by the Better Business Bureau of the absence of public information on his multimillion-dollar operations.

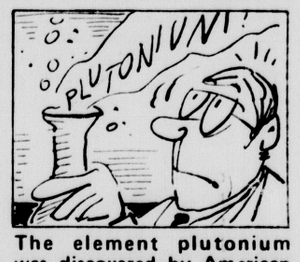

Court panel to seek uniform record keeping

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Supreme Court has appointed a committee of magistrate judges from throughout the state to develop a uniform record-keeping system for their courts.

Chief Justice J.P. Morgan said the project to be undertaken by the seven-member committee is made more necessary because of the change in the state's court system to be implemented in 1979. That court revision was approved by voters last November.

"When the magistrate judges become associate circuit judges (under the new court plan), the record-keeping systems in the 148 magistrate and probate courts must be coordinated with that system already in operation in 115 circuit clerk offices throughout the state," Morgan said.

Heading the committee will be Cooper County Magistrate Kenton Askren. The committee's operations will be financed with a grant from the Missouri Council on Criminal Justice.

The element plutonium was discovered by American physicist Edwin Mattison McMillan in 1940.

Sinatra to star in 'Laugh-In' tonight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC hasn't dented the ratings of ABC's "Charlie's Angels" with "Oregon Trail" on Wednesdays. So tonight, it's summoning the heavy artillery — a 'Laugh-In" with Frank Sinatra.

(Frank is on NBC twice more this month. He'll guest-host "Tonight" on Nov. 14, and may reveal then that his first TV movie, "Contract on Cherry Street," will be on NBC five nights later.)

The movie, predictably enough, is briefly joshed tonight, but the plug doesn't distract from a pretty good hour of rapid-fire swifties, sight gags, satire and assorted risque risibles.

The show is not flawless, of course. It has some now-tired gags about retired Capitol Hill activist Elizabeth Ray and congressional steno pools. And consumerist Ralph Nader offers some lifeless jabs at wicked automakers.

But the proceeding, greatly aided by such new-season regulars as Robin Williams, June Gable, Lenny Schultz and Kim Braden, has a brisker pace and more bite than the two previous "Laugh-In" specials this year.

One bit early in the hour is a quickie classic — a muscular chap flexes his biceps, triceps and possibly his precepts in time to the crashing beat of "The 1812 Overture."

Another good quickie: as the regulars do a ragged dance routine, a sign flits across the screen with the notation, "Choreography by Gerald Ford."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, RAriz., who last summer taped a batch of sayings for use in this season's six "Laugh-In" specials, is on hand from time to time to say, "I can dig it."

The onetime presidential candidate also takes obligue note of a British talk show star's $800,000-plus payment to chat with former President Richard M. Nixon. Says the good senator:

"If you see David Frost, you might mention I once handed in someone else's homework when I was in the fourth grade — and I'm ready to talk about it."

Sinatra, who doesn't sing in the show, spends much of his time chortling, emitting oneliners and good-naturedly reacting to whatever it is they do on the thing.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON – Panamanian Ambassador Gabriel Lewis has just concluded a quick correspondence course on how to win friends on Capitol Hill and influence their votes on the Panama Canal treaties.

He was instructed confidentially to court senators at "breakfast, lunch and dinner," to buy "a meal or two" for hungry reporters, to pass out contributions to the right senators and, above all, not to count on President Carter's inept lobbyists.

Ambassador Lewis sought the advice of a professional persuader, N.C. Livingstone, on what he could do to help persuade the Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaty. The ambassador got back a candid, five-page memo on the letterhead of Hill, Livingstone Associates, a Washington consulting firm.

Livingstone cautioned that the White House lobbyists, headed by the harassed Frank Moore, were babes in the legislative woods. "Few members of Frank Moore's congressional liaison staff at the White House have any real credibility or demonstrable expertise on Capitol Hill," Livingstone tipped off the ambassador. "To trust the White House to win ratification of the treaties is to take a severe risk."

Instead, the memo advised the Panamanians to "concentrate on good, old-fashioned flesh-pressing and shoe-leather diplomacy." Explained the memo: "Build personal ties and rapport with members of the Senate and their staffs. Court them at breakfast, lunch and dinner." In a sentence, Livingstone urged: "Live at the U.S. Senate for the next six months."

Another section of the memo, entitled "Persuasion by Contribution," offered this confidential advice: "Next year is an election year. Perhaps a dozen members of the Senate could be influenced by the promise of contributions or the threat to withhold such contributions. Prominent business and labor leaders could provide such pressure on key undecided members."

Perhaps as an afterthought about the Korean scandal, Livingstone added cautiously: "This is, to be sure, a sensitive matter, but it is in no way unusual in U.S. politics."

The memo included some instructions for manipulating the media. First, it recommended that the Panamanians "forget about the Washington Post and the New York Times." These eminent newspapers, explained Livingstone, "are already on your side."

Instead, he suggested that they concentrate on smaller papers whose Washington correspondents, he said, are often slighted. "Invite them personally to the embassy, grant them interviews, buy them a meal or two," he advised. Stressed the memo: "Most journalists from the smaller publications don't often get invitations of this kind."

As another effective tactic, Livingstone recommended that the Panamanians generate grass-roots pressure. This could be accomplished, he said, by recruiting businessmen and labor leaders to contact senators personally, by establishing close contacts with "key opinion-generators in each state" and by creating a citizens committee of "prominent Americans."

The committee, he suggested, should be "used as a vehicle to take out newspaper ads countering those placed in local newspapers by treaty opponents." He also had some advice on the advertising style: "The ads should be full-page, concise, attractive and composed with snappy journalism; no long-winded expositions."

Footnote: Livingstone told us he wrote the memo as a personal favor. "I haven't received a dime," he said, for his political primer. It was inadvertent, he explained, that the advice was written on his firm's stationery.

Fish wheels profitable for Alaskan fishermen

NENANA, Alaska (AP) — Ponderously and monotonously, Charlie Stevens' fish wheel screens the muddy waters of the Tanana River for migrating salmon.

Occasionally, the dull rhythm is broken by the sounds of a thrashing salmon scooped from the river by the huge wire baskets of the wheel.

It slides down a wooden trough into a holding box, its long spawning run from the Pacific Ocean brought to an end after an 840-mile journey up the Yukon and Tanana rivers.

The fish wheel has done its job. For Charlie Stevens and his pretty wife, Gayle, the work has just begun.

They must remove the catch from the holding box — up to four times a day during the height of the run — and process the fish.

They operate their two fish wheels for profit and for personal use of the catch.

The commercial salmon season was short this year. It took only 5½ days for the fish wheels on the Tanana to scoop up the 15,000 salmon set as a quota for the Nenana area.

Stevens hesitates to say how many salmon he caught for the commercial market. He does admit to an income of about $8,000 during the season, however, including cash for his own catch and profit from a fishbuying venture with a partner, Terry Clark.

The most profitable part of the commercial catch is the salmon eggs, used to make red caviar. The plump eggs sell for about $2.50 a pound to brokers in Seattle. At the retail level, red caviar brings about $32 a pound.

The chum salmon which make up the bulk of the commercial catch are sold for about $1.50 to $1.75 apiece. They average about nine pounds before they are dressed.

Each female carries some 3,-000 eggs, wieghing about one pound.

After the commercial season, Stevens and his wife set about catching salmon for their own use. There are no quotas, but under the rules for subsistence fishing he cannot sell or give away the fish he catches.

A fisherman in summer, a sled dog racer in winter and a heavy construction equipment operator in the spring, Stevens put away about 100 salmon this year for his family, including the two small Stevens children, and two student boarders who live with them.

He also froze about 2,500 salmon which will feed his 43 sled dogs during the winter months.

Candidates announce for winter princess

Four Contestants have entered the 1977 Sikeston Winter Princess contest.

Regina Hall, 18, a freshman at Southeast Missouri State University, is sponsored by The Athlete's Foot. She is a graduate of Lilbourn High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Hall of Lilbourn.

Paula Owens, 18, a senior at Sikeston High School is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Owens of 812 Courtney St., Sikeston. She is sponsored by Ken's Candy Co.

Kay Robertson, 17, is sponsored by Heritage House. She is a senior at Sikeston High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Robertson of Sikeston Route Four.

Anita Walker, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Walker of 510 AA Road, Sikeston. She is a senior at Sikeston High School and is sponsored by Eubanks-Finney Department Store.

The Winter Princess will be crowned on Dec. 3.

The contest is sponsored by the Sikeston Retail Merchants and the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce, which is also sponsoring the Christmas Parade on Dec. 3.

Math teachers will focus on calculators

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Calculators in the classroom will be the focus Nov. 5 of the fall meeting here of the Southeast Missouri Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Conducting the workshop, which is jointly sponsored by the council and the Department of Mathematics at Southeast Missouri State University, will be Earl OcKenga, an assistant professor and teacher in the laboratory school of the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls.

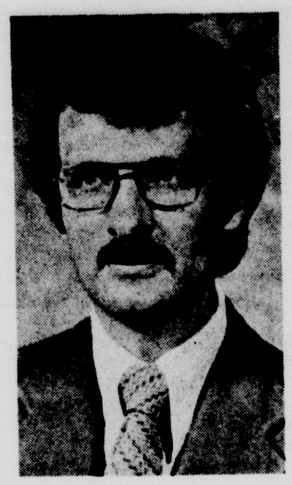

The workshop will be held in the University Center at Southeast Missouri State from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Neal Peterman, assistant professor of mathematics at the university and the faculty advisor to the math council, said the meeting is open to anyone interested in the topic without charge. He especially encouraged elementary teachers to attend, noting that the workshop will cover how to make use of calculators in the elementary classroom.

Participants are asked to bring a calculator with them.

OcKenga, who maintains that calculator activities make the learning of mathematics more enjoyable to both students and teachers, is the author of two books titled "Calculator Activities for the Classroom." He is also the author of elementary and junior high mathematics textbooks, and he has conducted workshops for elementary and secondary teachers for the last five years at Bemidji State University in Minnesota.

He is a graduate of Augustana College in Sioux Falls, S. D., and has a master's degree from the University of South Dakota.

Halloween events range from violent to tragic

By The Associated Press

About 50 persons at a traditional Halloween party staged by the San Francisco homosexual community were arrested on various charges early Tuesday when violence broke out in the crowded Polk Street celebration.

In Memphis, Tenn., a man who reportedly had earlier told trick or treating teenagers that he had run out of Halloween treats was later found shot to death.

A Houston boy was strangled in a noose set up in a church spook house.

Police in Joliet, Ill., reported a teen-ager was seriously burned when gasoline fire bombs were hurled at his group and Flint, Mich., authorities said two youths dressed in dark clothing died after they were struck by a car on a rural road.

The Halloween incidents were among several reported by authorities around the country.

Police in San Francisco said an estimated 100,000 persons jammed eight blocks of the city's Polk Street area for the gay community's Halloween party.

"It kind of got out of hand there for an hour," Lt. James Gray said of the annual affair. He said there were problems with pickpockets and pursesnatchers, as well as some assaults.

Most of those arrested were charged with violations ranging from drunkeness to robbery. Police said several thousand persons also gathered in the Castro Street area, heavily populated by homosexuals, for another party. No violence was reported at that celebration.

Authorities said four persons dressed in white hooded robes hurled gasoline fire bombs at three teen-age boys Monday night in Joliet, Ill., seriously burning 13-year-old Florincie Pescina. No motive for the assault was established.

Authorities in Memphis, Tenn., said Pierre Brooks, 26, died of a shotgun wound fired in what was described as an ambush situation.

A companion of the man told police that he and the victim had earlier argued with teenagers after they said they had no Halloween treats. He said the group declared it would return.

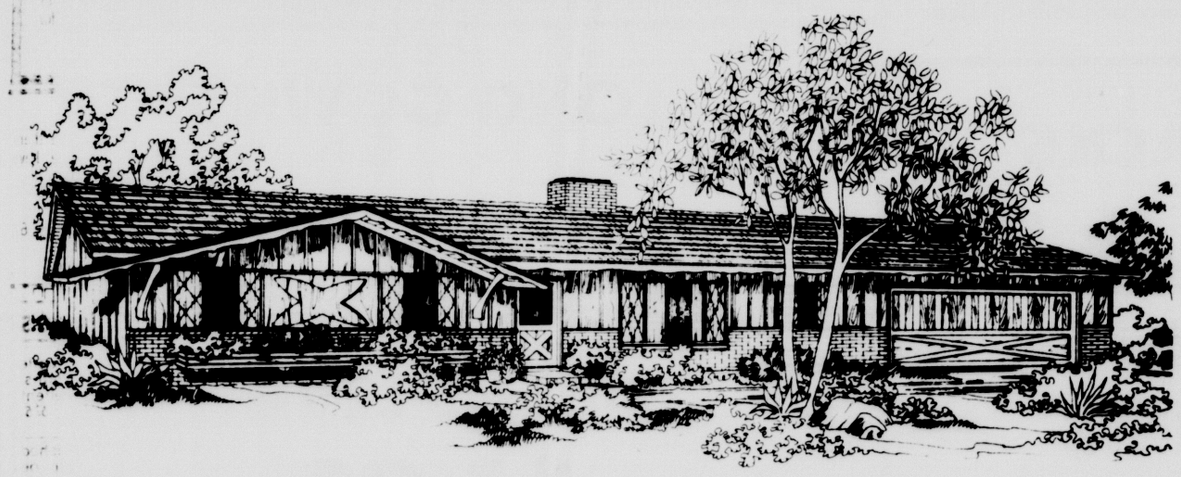

There were no suspects in the case.

A 14-year-old boy who was pretending to be a hanged man at Houston's North Main Baptist Church Monday night died after he apparently slipped the rope around his neck against instructions, authorities said. The youngster was identified as Michael Anthony Carter.

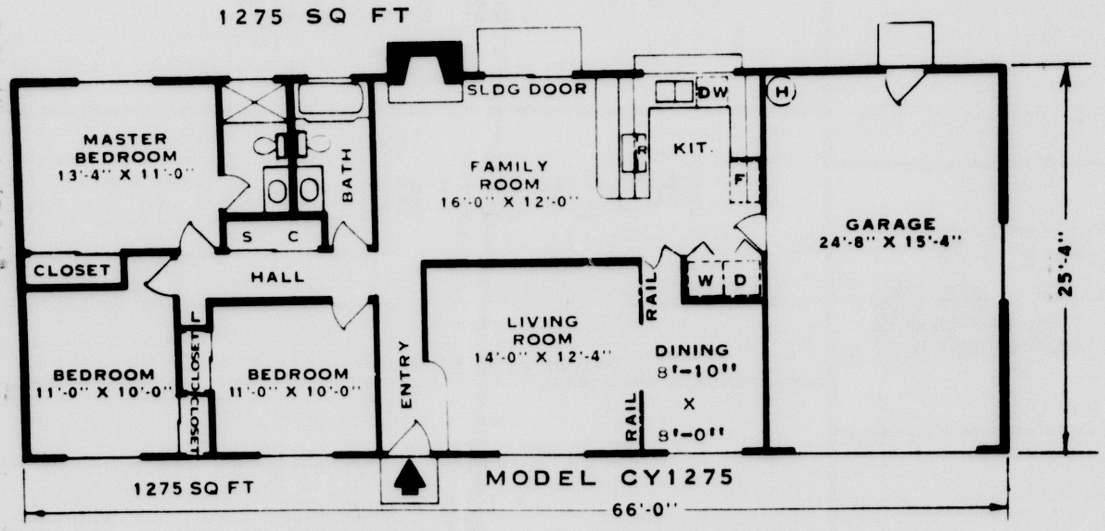

Recent strangulations of four elderly women in Columbus, Ga., was attributed to a small turnout by trick or treaters in the neighborhood where the victims lived.

A shopping center was set up as a trick or treat center and authorities said about 5,000 youths showed their costumes for treats there.

In Darien, Conn., about 100 high school students gobbled up a 100-foot-long banana split in 86 seconds as a Halloween stunt aimed at establishing a record in that category.

HOME DESIGN
By Larry Farnsworth

Take one look at this big, beautiful 1,275 square foot model and put it high on your list of favorite plans. It offers a comfortable, spacious home, designed to make day-in, day-out living just as pleasant as can be.

Here is a long, low ranch style dwelling, made even more attractive by its pleasing board and batten siding and that distinguished gabled roof. Note, too, its brick trim, charming, 'neath-the-window plant shelf, diamond paned windows and friendly Dutch door.

Inside, the neatly defined entry leads straight back to the family room and opens on the right to a lovely formal living room. See how the dining room, also totally formal and separate, adds dimension and spaciousness, separated only by a distinctive railing from the living room.

The 16-by-12-foot family room at the back of the house offers a cozy hearth as well as sliding glass doors to outdoor living areas. And when it's time for informal or hurry-up family meals, or snack time for guests, there is that handy dining-serving counter backing up one side of the kitchen's efficient U-shaped work area. Note, too, the fine and plentiful arrangement of cupboard and counter space in this delightful gourmet kitchen. The inside door to the big double garage is located handily out of the kitchen's major traffic areas.

At the far side of the house, opening from a hall which also provides extra storage space, are three bedrooms and a main bath. Note, too, that the large, back-of-the-house master bedroom has its own bath, and all three bedrooms have good closet space too.

Here, indeed is a house which you and your family can call home for many years to come.

Penalty for refusing breath test upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists arrested on drunken driving charges may be threatened with a temporary suspension of their driver's licenses if they refuse to take a chemical or breath analysis test, the Supreme Court said in effect today.

The justices set aside a ruling by a three-judge federal court striking down a Massachusetts law that imposed a 90-day driver's license suspension on any motorist refusing to take such tests after being stopped for alleged drunken driving.

All 50 states have similar laws but only 13, including Massachusetts, do not provide for a pre-suspension hearing. The others are Alabama, Alaska, Iowa, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, Delaware and Maine.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to the lower federal court with instructions to restudy it in light of a decision by the justices last May allowing for similar state action without a prior hearing.

The lower court decided that the Massachusetts law deprived motorists of their constitutional due process rights because it did not offer them a pre-suspension hearing at which they could dispute whether they did in fact refuse to take the test.

The state law provides for such a hearing after the suspension.

Donald Montrym challenged the law after his involvement in a traffic accident in Acton, Mass., on May 15, 1976.

Happy 19th Birthday, Kenny

Fish wheels profitable for Alaskan fishermen

NENANA, Alaska (AP) — Ponderously and monotonously, Charlie Stevens' fish wheel screens the muddy waters of the Tanana River for migrating salmon.

Occasionally, the dull rhythm is broken by the sounds of a thrashing salmon scooped from the river by the huge wire baskets of the wheel.

It slides down a wooden trough into a holding box, its long spawning run from the Pacific Ocean brought to an end after an 840-mile journey up the Yukon and Tanana rivers.

The fish wheel has done its job. For Charlie Stevens and his pretty wife, Gayle, the work has just begun.

They must remove the catch from the holding box — up to four times a day during the height of the run — and process the fish.

They operate their two fish wheels for profit and for personal use of the catch.

The commercial salmon season was short this year. It took only 5½ days for the fish wheels on the Tanana to scoop up the 15,000 salmon set as a quota for the Nenana area.

Stevens hesitates to say how many salmon he caught for the commercial market. He does admit to an income of about $8,000 during the season, however, including cash for his own catch and profit from a fishbuying venture with a partner, Terry Clark.

The most profitable part of the commercial catch is the salmon eggs, used to make red caviar. The plump eggs sell for about $2.50 a pound to brokers in Seattle. At the retail level, red caviar brings about $32 a pound.

The chum salmon which make up the bulk of the commercial catch are sold for about $1.50 to $1.75 apiece. They average about nine pounds before they are dressed.

Each female carries some 3,-000 eggs, wieghing about one pound.

After the commercial season, Stevens and his wife set about catching salmon for their own use. There are no quotas, but under the rules for subsistence fishing he cannot sell or give away the fish he catches.

A fisherman in summer, a sled dog racer in winter and a heavy construction equipment operator in the spring, Stevens put away about 100 salmon this year for his family, including the two small Stevens children, and two student boarders who live with them.

He also froze about 2,500 salmon which will feed his 43 sled dogs during the winter months.

Candidates announce for winter princess

Four Contestants have entered the 1977 Sikeston Winter Princess contest.

Regina Hall, 18, a freshman at Southeast Missouri State University, is sponsored by The Athlete's Foot. She is a graduate of Lilbourn High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Hall of Lilbourn.

Paula Owens, 18, a senior at Sikeston High School is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Owens of 812 Courtney St., Sikeston. She is sponsored by Ken's Candy Co.

Kay Robertson, 17, is sponsored by Heritage House. She is a senior at Sikeston High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Robertson of Sikeston Route Four.

Anita Walker, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Walker of 510 AA Road, Sikeston. She is a senior at Sikeston High School and is sponsored by Eubanks-Finney Department Store.

The Winter Princess will be crowned on Dec. 3.

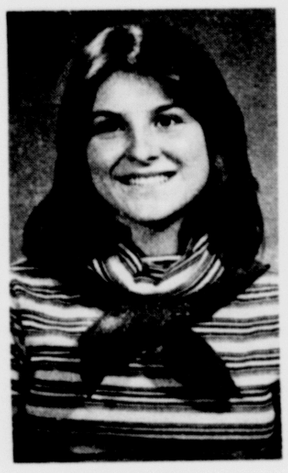

The contest is sponsored by the Sikeston Retail Merchants and the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce, which is also sponsoring the Christmas Parade on Dec. 3.

Math teachers will focus on calculators

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Calculators in the classroom will be the focus Nov. 5 of the fall meeting here of the Southeast Missouri Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

Conducting the workshop, which is jointly sponsored by the council and the Department of Mathematics at Southeast Missouri State University, will be Earl OcKenga, an assistant professor and teacher in the laboratory school of the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls.

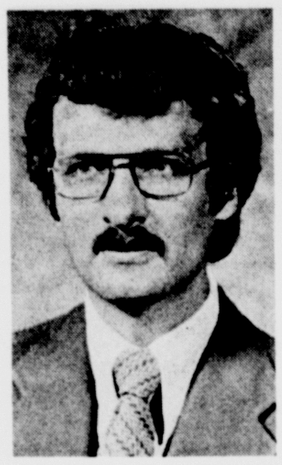

The workshop will be held in the University Center at Southeast Missouri State from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Neal Peterman, assistant professor of mathematics at the university and the faculty advisor to the math council, said the meeting is open to anyone interested in the topic without charge. He especially encouraged elementary teachers to attend, noting that the workshop will cover how to make use of calculators in the elementary classroom.

Participants are asked to bring a calculator with them.

OcKenga, who maintains that calculator activities make the learning of mathematics more enjoyable to both students and teachers, is the author of two books titled "Calculator Activities for the Classroom." He is also the author of elementary and junior high mathematics textbooks, and he has conducted workshops for elementary and secondary teachers for the last five years at Bemidji State University in Minnesota.

He is a graduate of Augustana College in Sioux Falls, S. D., and has a master's degree from the University of South Dakota.

Halloween events range from violent to tragic

By The Associated Press

About 50 persons at a traditional Halloween party staged by the San Francisco homosexual community were arrested on various charges early Tuesday when violence broke out in the crowded Polk Street celebration.

In Memphis, Tenn., a man who reportedly had earlier told trick or treating teenagers that he had run out of Halloween treats was later found shot to death.

A Houston boy was strangled in a noose set up in a church spook house.

Police in Joliet, Ill., reported a teen-ager was seriously burned when gasoline fire bombs were hurled at his group and Flint, Mich., authorities said two youths dressed in dark clothing died after they were struck by a car on a rural road.

The Halloween incidents were among several reported by authorities around the country.

Police in San Francisco said an estimated 100,000 persons jammed eight blocks of the city's Polk Street area for the gay community's Halloween party.

"It kind of got out of hand there for an hour," Lt. James Gray said of the annual affair. He said there were problems with pickpockets and pursesnatchers, as well as some assaults.

Most of those arrested were charged with violations ranging from drunkeness to robbery. Police said several thousand persons also gathered in the Castro Street area, heavily populated by homosexuals, for another party. No violence was reported at that celebration.

Authorities said four persons dressed in white hooded robes hurled gasoline fire bombs at three teen-age boys Monday night in Joliet, Ill., seriously burning 13-year-old Florincie Pescina. No motive for the assault was established.

Authorities in Memphis, Tenn., said Pierre Brooks, 26, died of a shotgun wound fired in what was described as an ambush situation.

A companion of the man told police that he and the victim had earlier argued with teenagers after they said they had no Halloween treats. He said the group declared it would return.

There were no suspects in the case.

A 14-year-old boy who was pretending to be a hanged man at Houston's North Main Baptist Church Monday night died after he apparently slipped the rope around his neck against instructions, authorities said. The youngster was identified as Michael Anthony Carter.

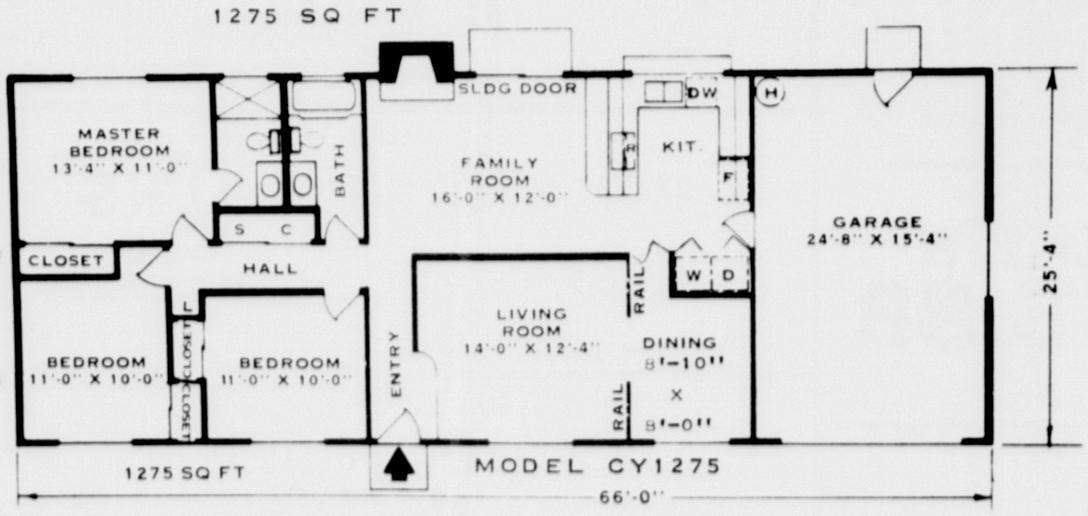

Recent strangulations of four elderly women in Columbus, Ga., was attributed to a small turnout by trick or treaters in the neighborhood where the victims lived.

A shopping center was set up as a trick or treat center and authorities said about 5,000 youths showed their costumes for treats there.

In Darien, Conn., about 100 high school students gobbled up a 100-foot-long banana split in 86 seconds as a Halloween stunt aimed at establishing a record in that category.

HELP WANTED

I am looking for a high school graduate to train in the field of restaurant food preparation at what we feel is Sikeston's newest and finest restaurant, Patti Todd's Supper Club. The individual I am seeking must be a conscientious person looking for a career, not just a job. He or she must be industrious and hardworking, able to gain other peoples respect, not by what they say, but by the example they set in their work. This person must be able to make decisions on their own after training, have a stable personal life, be punctual, and have reliable personal as well as work references as these will be verified.

Anyone feeling they fill these qualifications may apply between 9 a.m.-10:30 a.m. or 2 p.m.-4 p.m. only at Patti Todd's Supper Club 1501 E. Malone, Sikeston. Ask for Mike Kissell.

HELP WANTED

I am looking for a high school graduate to train in the field of restaurant food preparation at what we feel is Sikeston's newest and finest restaurant, Patti Todd's Supper Club. The individual I am seeking must be a conscientious person looking for a career, not just a job. He or she must be industrious and hardworking, able to gain other peoples respect, not by what they say, but by the example they set in their work. This person must be able to make decisions on their own after training, have a stable personal life, be punctual, and have reliable personal as well as work references as these will be verified.

Anyone feeling they fill these qualifications may apply between 9 a.m.-10:30 a.m. or 2 p.m.-4 p.m. only at Patti Todd's Supper Club 1501 E. Malone, Sikeston. Ask for Mike Kissell.
No phone calls please.

Deaths

Rickie Wilkerson

CLARKTON— Services for Rickie Edward Wilkerson, 18, of Route One, who died in a traffic accident here Tuesday, are scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday in Landess Funeral Home at Campbell with the Rev. Bill Orr officiating.

Burial will follow in Woodlawn Cemetery at Campbell.

He was born June 14, 1959 in Gideon to Bob and Nadine Hatton Wilkerson of Clarkton Route One, who survive.

A 1977 graduate of Clarkton High School, he was employed at Gideon-Anderson box plant in Gideon and was a lifetime resident of the area.

Other survivors include: One brother, Randy Wilkerson of Clarkton Route One, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wilkerson and Mr. and Mrs. Lavern Hatton of Clarkton Route One.

Friends may call after 6 p.m. today at the funeral home.

Myrtle Hime

VANDUSER— Services for Myrtle Hime, 71, of Route Two, are scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Vanduser Church of God, rather than Nunnelee Funeral Chapel as incorrectly reported in Tuesday's death notice.

Pallbearers will be Mike Price, Jerry Price, Terry Price, David Price, Larry Cannon and Larry Hime.

The name of a surviving sister, Mrs. Judy Tippen of Riverside, Calif., was incorrectly listed as Mrs. Judy Pippen.

William Botter

Services for William "Bill" Botter, 58, of Route Two, who died Monday night, are scheduled at 1 p.m. Friday in Crain-Barkett Funeral Home at Cairo, Ill., with the Rev. Henry Fischer officiating.

Burial will follow in National Cemetery at Mounds City, Ill.

Friends may call at the funeral home, where memorial rites will be conducted at 8:30 p.m. Thursday by the Eighth Street Elks club.

Born Nov. 30, 1918 in Cairo, he had been a bartender at the Ramada Inn of Sikeston for eight years and had previously worked as a bartender at the Mark Twain Restaurant in Cairo for over 16 years.

He was a member of the Cairo Elks Lodge No. 651, Cairo Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 2649 and the American Legion.

Survivors include: His widow, Pepo Botter; two daughters, Sue Botter of Sikeston and Nancy Monan of Mound City, Ill.; his mother, Ruth Groves of Cairo; one sister, Betty Shaltupsky of Sikeston; one brother, Philip Groves of CAiro Route One; and one grandson.

FILM RIGHTS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Paramount Pictures says it has acquired the film rights to "Lupe," a novel by Gene Thompson.

The novel, published by Random House, deals with "murder by supernatural forces and the terror of witchcraft in 20th-century California."

Wardell woman injured

WARDELL — A Wardell woman received moderate injuries in a two-car accident half a mile east of town Tuesday night on Route A.

The accident occurred at 7:10 p.m. when an eastbound car driven by Herman Scott Jackson, 47, of Wardell crossed the center line and eas struck by a westbound car driven by Peggy Ann Lowry, 20 of Wardell.

The Lowry woman received injuries and was taken to Pemiscot Memorial Hospital at Hayti.

Jackson was arrested for failure to drive on the right side of the highway.

Employees honored

Missouri Utilities Co. honored employees at its annual service recognition awards dinner held at the Ramada Inn Tuesday night. Francis Lengfield, company president, presented the awards. Those who received awards are, bottom row, from left, Wylie A. Alliston of Sikeston, 30 year award; Alvin M. Rockett of Sikeston, 25 year award; Tommy J. Plunk of Sikeston, 10 year award. Top row, from left, Paul E. Atwill of Lilbourn, 30 year award; Russell L. Walker of Charleston, 30 year award; Charles W. Brashers, of Charleston, 25 year award and S. E. Lewis of Charleston, 15 year award. Also receiving awards were Riley L. High of East Prairie, 30 year award; Katie E. Wilson of East Prairie, 25 year award; Jerome T. Blocker of Charleston, 10 year award, and Mitchell D. Saling of Sikeston, 10 year award.

Air-condition units stolen from store site

Two 10-ton air-condition units were stolen sometime Monday night or early Tuesday morning from the construction site of the new Learue & McKinnie M & H Store on Highway 62 East in Miner, according to a store official.

The air conditioners were to have been mounted on the roof of the new store, but were still crated when they were taken, according to Lynn McKinnie, co-owner.

McKinnie said the air conditioners were under a light.

He said it would have taken at least two men to load the units on a truck.

The air conditioners were valued at $5,000. The store is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the thieves.

Fate of Carter energy plan up to conferees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of President Carter's program to conserve energy and reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil rests with House-Senate conferees following completion of floor action.

All elements of the energy legislation, first proposed by the president in a nationwide television address last April, are before the negotiating panel. The committee now has the task of working out a compromise on the complex energy conservation and tax legislation.

The panel must reconcile House measures endorsing most of what Carter requested with Senate bills that reject many of his major proposals. Senate passage of its tax bill earlier this week opened the way for the committee to begin serious work.

But enroute to the committee, how has the the president's energy program fared since he unveiped it last April 20?

Here is a rundown on how each house dealt with the major proposals and what decisions are now facing the conference panel:

—Crude Oil Tax: The House approved the president's proposal to make domestic petroleum as expensive as imported oil by 1980 through a tax that would add about 7 cents a gallon to gasoline and other petroleum products.

The Senate's energy tax bill ignored this tax altogether. Democratic congressional leaders hope it, along with other administration tax proposals, can be revived in the conference committee.

—Rebates to Consumers for Energy Taxes: The House passed the administration plan to rebate revenues from the crude oil tax to consumers, at least for one year. It would give about $22 to each adult in a household.

Because the Senate bill does not contain this tax, it did not formally deal with the rebate issue. But the Senate appears to favor using revenues from such a tax — if one is ultimately adopted — to encourage energy conservation and increased production.

Some combination of this proposal, with part of the tax revenues being used as rebates and the rest as energy incentives, appears likely to emerge if the conference committee goes along with the crude-oil tax.

—Natural Gas Pricing: The House approved Carter's plan to raise the price ceiling on natural gas from $1.46 per thousand cubic feet to $1.75 while maintaining price controls and extending regulation to gas produced and used in the same state. The Senate rejected the proposal, voting instead to deregulate gas prices after two years.

This issue poses a major problem for conferees. Carter has vowed to veto any bill that lifts price controls on natural gas. But keeping the controls will likely be resisted by Senate negotiators.

A possible compromise expected to be offered is one which could keep controls — at least for the next decade — but which would set a price ceiling for newly discovered natural gas much higher than the $1.75 advocated by Carter, possibly in the vicinity of just over $2 per 1,000 cubic feet.

—Tax on Inefficient Cars: The House approved Carter's plan to impose a big tax on cars that get poor gas mileage, although the measure was modified slightly to make it apply to fewer cars. The Senate rejected this approach altogether, voting instead for an outright ban on inefficient cars, starting in 1980 with cars that get less than 16 miles per gallon.

Conferees have deadlocked over this issue. A possible compromise banning the manufuture of some fuel-thirsty cars while taxing others is a possibility.

—Standby Gasoline Tax: Carter proposed increasing gasoline taxes by up to 50 cents a gallon if U.S. consumption con tinues to climb rapidly. The House rejected it and no serious efforts were made in the Senate to revive it.

—Tax on Industrial Use of Natural Gas and Oil: This is the only Carter energy tax passed by both House and Senate, although in slightly different versions. Neither is as tough as that proposed by the president. Both bills would rebate the tax to plants that convert to coal.

—Coal Conversion: Both houses passed, and conferees have already tentatively endorsed, Carter's proposal to ban new utilities and industries from burning natural gas and oil. Conferees are now considering what to do about existing plants. The Senate approved a much milder version that would allow all but the biggest plants to continue burning oil.

—Electric Utility Rates: The House adopted the President's plan to force utilities to revise their rate structures, a move that would make electricity cheaper at night or during other off-peak times and would bar discount rates to industries that use lots of power.

The Senate rejected this approach, although it voted to reduce the electric bills of persons over 62 years of age by about 40 percent. This is expected to be another difficult issue for the conference panel to resolve.

—Conservation Credits: Homeowners could receive up to $400 in tax credits for installing insulation, storm windows and other energy-saving devices and even bigger tax breaks for solar energy equipment under Carter's plan.

Drugs stolen at Chaffee

CHAFFEE — Controlled drugs were the main object of thieves in a break-in Monday night of the Wehmeyer Clinic at 243 W. Yoakum.

Fourteen different types of drugs seven of which are for injection only, were taken in the break-in. Thieves entered the building by breaking a bottom pane on a window on the west side of the building. The window, was partially concealed from view by shrubbery that had grown up alonside the building.

Value of the drugs has not been determined, police said. A desk drawer containing $40 had been opened with the money in view, but it was not touched.

The Chaffee Police Department, along with the Scott County Sheriff's Department, is continuing its investigation.

Billfold is stolen from purse

Cheryl D. Holt, 207 Missouri Ave., reported the theft of her billfold from her purse Tuesday at Jean Allen's dress shop in Kingsway Mall, according to the Public Safety Department.

The theft occurred between 5:15 and 6:15 p.m. while the purse was in a coat room. The wallet contained $10 and personal papers.

Dear Sir:

This letter is in response to articles which have appeared your paper in the past week giving Mrs. Madelyn Murray O'Hair more free publicity. As one citizen of Southeast Missouri I enter my protest of such action on your part. I further protest the idea that a Newspaper such as yours would print items without doing any checking as to the validity of the information in them.

To set the record straight and to help the people of Southeast Missouri be properly informed, I hope you will print my letter as soon as possible.

As of 11:30 a.m. Oct. 28, 1977 I talked with Ms. Celeste Green at the Federal Communications Commission in Washington D.C. and was informed that the petition to which you refer, namely R.M. 2493 was denied by the FCC two years ago.

What is going to happen, I am afraid, is that such things as this article appearing in your paper and getting people to write to the FCC is going to cause them to pay even less attention when and if there is a real necessity for such action.

Thank you for helping to correct the information that has caused such a stir in our area.

Yours truly,
Rev. Paul C. Tripp

P.S. for the information of your readers and yourself, should Mrs. O'Hair begin any such drive I will be one of the first to oppose her.

FILM RIGHTS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Paramount Pictures says it has acquired the film rights to "Lupe," a novel by Gene Thompson.

The novel, published by Random House, deals with "murder by supernatural forces and the terror of witchcraft in 20th-century California."

Wardell woman injured

WARDELL — A Wardell woman received moderate injuries in a two-car accident half a mile east of town Tuesday night on Route A.

The accident occurred at 7:10 p.m. when an eastbound car driven by Herman Scott Jackson, 47, of Wardell crossed the center line and eas struck by a westbound car driven by Peggy Ann Lowry, 20 of Wardell.

The Lowry woman received injuries and was taken to Pemiscot Memorial Hospital at Hayti.

Jackson was arrested for failure to drive on the right side of the highway.

Fate of Carter energy plan up to conferees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fate of President Carter's program to conserve energy and reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil rests with House-Senate conferees following completion of floor action.

All elements of the energy legislation, first proposed by the president in a nationwide television address last April, are before the negotiating panel. The committee now has the task of working out a compromise on the complex energy conservation and tax legislation.

The panel must reconcile House measures endorsing most of what Carter requested with Senate bills that reject many of his major proposals. Senate passage of its tax bill earlier this week opened the way for the committee to begin serious work.

But enroute to the committee, how has the the president's energy program fared since he unveiped it last April 20?

Here is a rundown on how each house dealt with the major proposals and what decisions are now facing the conference panel:

—Crude Oil Tax: The House approved the president's proposal to make domestic petroleum as expensive as imported oil by 1980 through a tax that would add about 7 cents a gallon to gasoline and other petroleum products.

The Senate's energy tax bill ignored this tax altogether. Democratic congressional leaders hope it, along with other administration tax proposals, can be revived in the conference committee.

—Rebates to Consumers for Energy Taxes: The House passed the administration plan to rebate revenues from the crude oil tax to consumers, at least for one year. It would give about $22 to each adult in a household.

Because the Senate bill does not contain this tax, it did not formally deal with the rebate issue. But the Senate appears to favor using revenues from such a tax — if one is ultimately adopted — to encourage energy conservation and increased production.

Some combination of this proposal, with part of the tax revenues being used as rebates and the rest as energy incentives, appears likely to emerge if the conference committee goes along with the crude-oil tax.

—Natural Gas Pricing: The House approved Carter's plan to raise the price ceiling on natural gas from $1.46 per thousand cubic feet to $1.75 while maintaining price controls and extending regulation to gas produced and used in the same state. The Senate rejected the proposal, voting instead to deregulate gas prices after two years.

This issue poses a major problem for conferees. Carter has vowed to veto any bill that lifts price controls on natural gas. But keeping the controls will likely be resisted by Senate negotiators.

A possible compromise expected to be offered is one which could keep controls — at least for the next decade — but which would set a price ceiling for newly discovered natural gas much higher than the $1.75 advocated by Carter, possibly in the vicinity of just over $2 per 1,000 cubic feet.

—Tax on Inefficient Cars: The House approved Carter's plan to impose a big tax on cars that get poor gas mileage, although the measure was modified slightly to make it apply to fewer cars. The Senate rejected this approach altogether, voting instead for an outright ban on inefficient cars, starting in 1980 with cars that get less than 16 miles per gallon.

Conferees have deadlocked over this issue. A possible compromise banning the manufuture of some fuel-thirsty cars while taxing others is a possibility.

—Standby Gasoline Tax: Carter proposed increasing gasoline taxes by up to 50 cents a gallon if U.S. consumption con tinues to climb rapidly. The House rejected it and no serious efforts were made in the Senate to revive it.

—Tax on Industrial Use of Natural Gas and Oil: This is the only Carter energy tax passed by both House and Senate, although in slightly different versions. Neither is as tough as that proposed by the president. Both bills would rebate the tax to plants that convert to coal.

—Coal Conversion: Both houses passed, and conferees have already tentatively endorsed, Carter's proposal to ban new utilities and industries from burning natural gas and oil. Conferees are now considering what to do about existing plants. The Senate approved a much milder version that would allow all but the biggest plants to continue burning oil.

—Electric Utility Rates: The House adopted the President's plan to force utilities to revise their rate structures, a move that would make electricity cheaper at night or during other off-peak times and would bar discount rates to industries that use lots of power.

The Senate rejected this approach, although it voted to reduce the electric bills of persons over 62 years of age by about 40 percent. This is expected to be another difficult issue for the conference panel to resolve.

—Conservation Credits: Homeowners could receive up to $400 in tax credits for installing insulation, storm windows and other energy-saving devices and even bigger tax breaks for solar energy equipment under Carter's plan.

Dear Sir:

This letter is in response to articles which have appeared your paper in the past week giving Mrs. Madelyn Murray O'Hair more free publicity As one citizen of Southeast Missouri I enter my protest of such action on your part. I further protest the idea that a Newspaper such as yours would print items without doing any checking as to the validity of the information in them.

To set the record straight and to help the people of Southeast Missouri be properly informed, I hope you will print my letter as soon as possible.

As of 11:30 a.m. Oct. 28, 1977 I talked with Ms. Celeste Green at the Federal Communications Commission in Washington D.C. and was informed that the petition to which you refer, namely R.M. 2493 was denied by the FCC two years ago.

What is going to happen, I am afraid, is that such things as this article appearing in your paper and getting people to write to the FCC is going to cause them to pay even less attention when and if there is a real necessity for such action.

Thank you for helping to correct the information that has caused such a stir in our area.

Yours truly,
Rev. Paul C. Tripp

P.S. for the information of your readers and yourself, should Mrs. O'Hair begin any such drive I will be one of the first to oppose her.

Air-condition units stolen from store site

Two 10-ton air-condition units were stolen sometime Monday night or early Tuesday morning from the construction site of the new Learue & McKinnie M & H Store on Highway 62 East in Miner, according to a store official.

The air conditioners were to have been mounted on the roof of the new store, but were still crated when they were taken, according to Lynn McKinnie, co-owner.

McKinnie said the air conditioners were under a light.

He said it would have taken at least two men to load the units on a truck.

The air conditioners were valued at $5,000. The store is offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the thieves.

Drugs stolen at Chaffee

CHAFFEE — Controlled drugs were the main object of thieves in a break-in Monday night of the Wehmeyer Clinic at 243 W. Yoakum.

Fourteen different types of drugs seven of which are for injection only, were taken in the break-in. Thieves entered the building by breaking a bottom pane on a window on the west side of the building. The window, was partially concealed from view by shrubbery that had grown up alonside the building.

Value of the drugs has not been determined, police said. A desk drawer containing $40 had been opened with the money in view, but it was not touched.

The Chaffee Police Department, along with the Scott County Sheriff's Department, is continuing its investigation.

Billfold is stolen from purse

Cheryl D. Holt, 207 Missouri Ave., reported the theft of her billfold from her purse Tuesday at Jean Allen's dress shop in Kingsway Mall, according to the Public Safety Department.

The theft occurred between 5:15 and 6:15 p.m. while the purse was in a coat room. The wallet contained $10 and personal papers.

$1000.00 REWARD

Leading to the arrest & conviction of person or persons involved in the loss of two 10 ton Friedrich air conditioners from Learue & McKinnie Super Mkt.

the people's korner

Enclosed letter with attachments was mailed to Congressman Ed Jones, (D., Tenn.) and Secretary of Agriculture, Bob Bergland.

Scott Matthews

The Honorable Ed Jones
House Post Office
Washington D. C.

Dear Sir:

It was with total disbelief that I read the comments attributed to you in the enclosed article from the "Delta Farm Press" (Oct. 7, 1977). The reason for my shock is because it appears to me that your understanding of the farm situation is disappointingly low. Please explain why.

1. The greatest sustained period of peacetime economic prosperity for the U.S. farmer has been from fall, 1972, through spring, 1977. It was during this period that the farmer was producing all-out for the first time, and he was selling his crop on the basis of world demand. This was the first time outsiders could begin to comprehend how totally efficient the Anmerican food production process really is. Loan and target prices ceased to be meaningful, because the hungry bellies of the world were willing to pay a lot more for the commodities. The forces of supply and demand were at last allowed to function in a manner totally free from governmental intervention.

2. There are two -- and only two -- obstacles so far that the farmer has yet to surmount. spiraling costs and embargos. The first, of these is faced by every businessman in the country, but it is only the farmer who cannot merely pass these costs along to a consumer. The farmer must take what the market offers, and if the market is not generous, the farmer must absorb the loss himself. But he knows this when he goes into farming. The second obstacle (embargos) is the cruelest, most insideous yet devised by because there is no way a farmer can prepare for them. Embargos occur only at time, when farmers are finally reaping their rewards for their year's work; and the bottom is artificially knocked out of the marketplace by the hand of government. Then, in the years following embargos, prices begin a decline because of lost overseas markets and broken contracts. Would you, Mr. Jones, ever so business again with a man who reneged on a contract with you? Why then would Japan, or India, or any other country dependent on our grain? Further, the only people in the U.S. who can "beat the bushes" to restore our lost markets -- the U.S.D.A. -- are spending all their resources administering the mandated socialism of the food stamp program. If U.S.D.A. doesn't develop new outlets for American food production, then even a 50% planting set-aside program wouldn't do much to improve prices to farmers. Unfortunately, it appears to me that loan and target prices are due to once again become the way of life for the farmer.

3. Farm prices do not affect consumers, as you seem to believe. Sure, we all remember the "dollar-a-loaf" bread scare a few years ago when wheat was selling in excess of $5.00 per bushel. But, Mr. Jones, what about today, when a loaf of bread costs more than it did then, and wheat sells for under $2.00? Why is it that farmers are blamed by people like yourself for raising prices to the consumer, but the labor unions and middle-men are not blamed for raising prices during the periods of precipitous market decline, such as exists today? The American farmer is vitally dependent upon the housewife as an ultimate consumer of his annual production. He is not about to discourage her buying his goods. But how can you say that the past farm policies have "hurt the consumers", when in fact, the percent of discretionary income spent on food in the USA (17%) is not only the lowest in the world, but has actually declined from around 23% as recently as 1957? If your new farm bill will help consumers, as you seem to imply that it will, my wife -- who also is a consumer -- will be thrilled. However, I'll bet you my social security benefits (due in 2019) that you'll never see the price of food in a grocery store decline when farm prices decline. Any takers?

4. Labor unions are the biggest non-governmental threat to farmers and consumers of any outside factors. Whether they strike in the New Orleans docks at harvest time, as they are doing now, or whether they refuse to load wheat for export, as George Meany recently directed them to do, the price of these goods goes up to the consumer and down to the farmer. Farmers and consumers need clout to break the shackles placed on them by the greedy union bosses. Congress has only lately stood up to unions. Will it be able to after 1978?

5. Finally, Mr. Jones, no farmer looks to government loan programs to see which crop to plant, because loan and target prices are so low as to be a joke. A farmer looks to plant whatever he can make the most money growing. Thanks to your bill, he now has to pay interest or opportunity costs on 20% of his farm land, depending upon whether or not his farm is paid for. He must pay taxes on ground he is forbidden to cultivate. (Oh, sure, the program is "voluntary", but your bill will certainly make him wish he had complied with it.) And he must look toward another year of low prices and higher costs.

In summary, Congressman Jone, farmers are "paying a price" because of embargos runaway costs, unions, and an Agriculture Department intent only on the redistribution of the national Department intent only on the redistribution of the national wealth. Farmers are NOT "paying a price because of Earl Butz."

Your observations and beliefs disappoint me, Mr. Jones, because all along I thought Tennessee representatives were from a farm state, and not like the Massachusetts, from a welfare state.

Thank you for your time in reading my letter. Hopefully the enclosed articles from "The Wall Street Journal" and "U.S. News" will also serve as some enlightenment for you and your staff.

Earl Butz "Free Market" Gets Blame

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Rep. Ed Jones (D., Tenn.) recently witnessed the signing of the 1977 farm bill into law by President Carter and said he hoped that the new bill will lay the groundwork for a rational and coordinated agricultural and food policy for the nation.

"We have come through eight years of a national farm policy that has been uncoordinated and very damaging to the nation's farmers," said Jones, who is the fifth ranking majority member of the House Agriculture Committee and co-author of the new law.

"Farmers are having to pay the price for those policies advocatred and practiced by Earl Butz is mounting commodity surpluses have driven prices below costs of production on may farm products. And that policy has not just affected the farms either, it has hurt the consumers."

"For the most part, farmers can't even get enough to cover their production costs much less make a profit. The fluctuation of the previous administration's policies have also been one of the prime reasons for the skyrocketing prices of food in the supermarket, too.

"A few more years of that kind of sporadic and uncoordinated policy would make a complete shambles of our country's tremendous capacity to produce food and fiber for ourselves and the rest of the world as well."

Jones added that he hoped the new farm bill will offer some stability to agricultural markets while assuring America of abundant supplies of food products.

He was part of a Congressional delegation who took part in the signing ceremonies which were held in the Rose at the White House.

REVIEW & OUTLOOK
The Butz Bear Market

From where we stand it looks like the best thing that's happened to the U.S. economy all year is the bumper grain crop produced by American farmers and the eagerness of the Russians to pay cold cash for a piece of it. Yet up and down Wall Street the news that the grain sales mean inflation, inflation means higher interest rates and higher interest rates mean a falling stock market. Ergo this is "The Butz Bear Market" and the Secretary of Agricultiure should be boiled in oil.

Indeed, inflation has reared its ugly head once more and interest rates are on the move again, but Earl Bitz, the farmers, and the Russians have next to nothing to do with it. The sale of the bumper crop, much of which would otherwise go into storage, represents a transfer of wealth from the Soviet Union to the United States. Mr. Butz should really be getting a medal, but suddenly he is the convenient scapegoat for all those who have been saying for months that the government need not concern itself with inflation. They can now say they would have been right, except for Mr. Butz and the Russians.

In this camp are politicians and their economist allies who have been saying budget deficits, even $150 billion of red ink over two years, are not inflationary when the economy is not at full employment. So too are those who have blithely argued that the money supply could be shot up to new heights without worry of inflation, also because there is unutilized capacity in the economy. And Arthur Burns, who must know better, is not above making Mr. Butz and the Russians the fall guys for inflation, as he did with trasparent innuendo in his Tuesday testimony before the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

In fact, interest rates started up, and the stock market started down, the moment Mr. Burns pulled the money supply off the 14% growth track it was on from late April through mid-June. With moderate money growth, the Treasury borrowings to cover deficits will push interest rates up. This regrettable, but far preferable to ballooning money growth and a new boom-and-bust cycle. None of this will come as a total surprise to anyone who followed the spring discussions of crowding out.

Additional Soviet purchases of wheat, to be sure, will add to inflation somewhere in the world, But the U.S. cannot isolate itself from this effect by banning wheat sales to the Soviets; wheat is an internationally traced good, and the price in the U.S. is affected by Canadian sales as well as American sales. To the contrary, the U.S. is far better off if it is the one selling the wheat, so long as the sales are for cash and not subsidized. This makes the U.S. wealthier and the dollar stronger. A stronger dollar means lower prices on imported goods, making up for the higher prices on wheat. The U.S. cannot come out behind from gaining more wealth.

In the 1972 sale, the U.S. government was subsidizing the exports, thus giving away resources, making the U.S. poorer and stimulating inflation. Also, the Russians were able to buy up a lot of wheat at $1.60 a bushel before anyone recognized the impact of their purchasea on U.S. prices. Now the Russians are paying unsubsidized prices—about $3.17 for corn, $4 for wheat—and are being watched like hawks.

In any event, the U.S. harvest is so enormous that even with the export sales the carryover grain stocks will be higher at the end of the year than at the start. Going into 1975, we had 15.4 million tons of feed grain on hand. At worst, after all the export sales, Mr. Butz estimates that we'll have 29 million tons on hand at the end of the year.We began the year with 319 million bushels of wheat and will go out at no worse than 523 million bushels. We started with 235 million bushels of soybeans and will go out with no less than 430 million bushels.

A few months ago, the short-sighted non-farm economic sector was gleefully anticipating the collapse of farm prices associated with a bumper crop, as if cities really benefit by bankruptices on the farm. And Secretary Butz was in disfavor with his short-sigh ted farm constituents for resitting all attempts to get the government back into farming on a big scale. Now, he's a hero again on the farms and a scapegoat in Washington, but the net result is that farm income will remain high enough and carryovers low enough so that farmers next year will want to and be able to shoot for another record crop.

All of this is good, not bad. Would that fiscal and monetary policy looked as hopeful. The only damage Mr. Butz and the Russians seem likely to do is to distract attention from the real problems.

From Mid-America THE NATION'S GREATEST SUCCESS STORY

He keeps the dollar strong, helps pay the bill for foreign oil, feeds the U.S. and millions around the world—the man who tills the soil.

DESMOINES, Ia.

What you are told out here is that the wonder of America is not its space spectaculars, its 100 million autos or its skyscrapers—it is the American farmer.

Futhermore, you learn that the "hick" of yesterday is today the most potent force in the entire U.S. economy—producing more, buying more, exporting more goods by far than any other business in the country.

Here in the heart of the rich corn belt, at the start of another crop year, farmers are againsetting in motion the world's most efficient food-production system.

Spirits are high. Planting conditions have rarely been better. A dry spring enabled field work to jump off to a head start of two to three weeks. Then came the rains, just in time to dispel worry that a widespread drought was taking hold.

For some wheat farmers in the Southwest, the rains were too late to revive land scoured by wind and blowing dust. But for most, the moisture should produce a wheat crop approaching last year's record.

Crop projections. Over all, prospects are good for a harvest that will equal the 1975 outpouring of 202 million tons of corn and other livestock feed grains, 71 million tons of wheat and rice, 253 million tons of hay and silage, 8 million bales of cotton, 16 million tons of potatoes, and vast quantities of fruit, vegetables, meat and dairy products.

That is good news for the world, much of which is fed from the U.S. breadbasket. American farms now supply fully half of all the grain moving in world trade.

Projected grain exports in the year that ends June 30 are 79 million metric tons, a whopping increase over the 64 million of the previous year.

American grain pouring into ships destined for foreign ports keeps the nation's trade balance from sinking deep into the red, and thus underpins the U.S. dollar.

Total saled of agricultural products abroad this year will bring in an estimated 22 billion dollars—far and away the largest single source of U.S. sales abroad. Chemical exports last year were a distant second at 9 billion.

Without this 22 billion dollars from export farm sales, Washington would be hard put to pay for the foreign oil that must be had to keep the U.S. economy humming. The oil-import bill in 1975 was 25 billion and will approach 30 billion in 1976.

Farmers have got off the taxpayers' backs. They no longer are paid billions from the U.S. Treasury for not growing crops.

Such payments climbed steadily from 2.5 billion dollars a year in 1965 to a peak of 4 billion in 1972, and dropped to 2.6 billion in 1973.

In the current year, Government checks to farmers are expected to total less than half a billion dollars. Most of that will be paid out under disaster-relief programs to those hit by drought, floods, other catastrophes.

Government no longer stores a glut of grain at taxpayers' expense. At one time, this cost approached 1 million dollars a day. Farmers now hold their own grain until they are ready to sell on the open market.

Most productive industry. Productivity on family farms outstrips that of every other industry in the country. Output per man-hour has increased 65.2 per cent since 1965. By comparison, output per man-hour in U.S. factories is up by 14.6 per cent in that time.

Each farmer produces the food and fiber to supply 49 Americans. On top of that, he turns out the products that move into export markets. Ten years ago, each farmer provided for the needs of 35 people in this country.

To put it another way—there now are 10 per cent more Americans, and they are fed by 22 per cent fewer farmers.

Thanks to this high productivity, American families eat for less of their take-home pay than the people of any other country in the world.

In 1975 the average U.S. family spent 17.1 per cent of its income after taxes on from a low of 16.3 per cent in 1972 and 1973 because of a two-year run-up in food prices.

That still is a bargain when compared with other nations. available figures, 1972, show that the French spend 23.4 per cent of take-home pay on food. In West Germany, the figure is 24.2 per cent, in Japan, 26 per cent, Britain, 29.8 per cent, and Italy 33.6 per cent. In Russia food takes 35 per cent of consumer expenditure.

Farmers are the nation's biggest private spenders, laying out billions for tractors, combines, trucks, fertilizer, fuel, barbed wire and countless other supplies.

In 1975, U.S. farmers had a gross income of 99.2 billion dollars, of which they spent 75.5 billion on production expenses, winding ;up with net realized income of 23.7 billion.

That was considerably under their best year ever, 1973, when net income hit 30 billion dollars.

Average net income per farm in 1975 was $8,440, down from $10,549 in 1973. Such averages are far exceeded by many of the family farms here in mid-America.

Profit picture. The story of one highly capitalized and efficient farm of mor than 1,000 acres in Illinois is reported on page 55.

Not all farmers operate on such a large scale. Vernon and Helen Johnson say that only after 30 years of grinding work are they beginning to make a comfortable living on their place near Boone, Ia. They own 226 acres and rent another 300 acres, feeding a few cattle and raising corn and soybeans that are sold for cash.

In 1974, the Johnson farm grossed $48,902. By the time

Scott Matthews

House Post Office
Washington D. C.

Dear Sir:

It was with total disbelief that I read the comments attributed to you in the enclosed article from the "Delta Farm Press" (Oct. 7, 1977). The reason for my shock is because it appears to me that your understanding of the farm situation is disappointingly low. Please explain why.

1. The greatest sustained period of peacetime economic prosperity for the U.S. farmer has been from fall, 1972, through spring, 1977. It was during this period that the farmer was producing all-out for the first time, and he was selling his crop on the basis of world demand. This was the first time outsiders could begin to comprehend how totally efficient the Anmerican food production process really is. Loan and target prices ceased to be meaningful, because the hungry bellies of the world were willing to pay a lot more for the commodities. The forces of supply and demand were at last allowed to function in a manner totally free from governmental intervention.

2. There are two -- and only two -- obstacles so far that the farmer has yet to surmount, spiraling costs and embargos. The first, of these is faced by every businessman in the country, but it is only the farmer who cannot merely pass these costs along to a consumer. The farmer must take what the market offers, and if the market is not generous, the farmer must absorb the loss himself. But he knows this when he goes into farming. The second obstacle (embargos) is the cruelest, most insideous yet devised by because there is no way a farmer can prepare for them. Embargos occur only at time, when farmers are finally reaping their rewards for their year's work; and the bottom is artificially knocked out of the marketplace by the hand of government. Then, in the years following embargos, prices begin a decline because of lost overseas markets and broken contracts. Would you, Mr. Jones, ever so business again with a man who reneged on a contract with you? Why then would Japan, or India, or any other country dependent on our grain? Further, the only people in the U.S. who can "beat the bushes" to restore our lost markets -- the U.S.D.A. -- are spending all their resources administering the mandated socialism of the food stamp program. If U.S.D.A. doesn't develop new outlets for American food production, then even a 50% plan ting set-aside program wouldn't do much to improve prices to farmers. Unfortunately, it appears to me that loan and target prices are due to once again become the way of life for the farmer.

3. Farm prices do not affect consumers, as you seem to believe. Sure, we all remember the "dollar-a-loaf" bread scare a few years ago when wheat was selling in excess of $5.00 per bushel. But, Mr. Jones, what about today, when a loaf of bread costs more than it did then, and wheat sells for under $2.00? Why is it that farmers are blamed by people like yourself - for raising prices to the consumer, but the labor unions and middle-men are not blamed for raising prices during the periods of precipitous market decline, such as exists today? The American farmer is vitally dependent upon the housewife as an ultimate consumer of his annual production. He is not about to discourage her buying his goods. If your new farm bill will help consumers, as you seem to imply that it will, my wife -- who also is a consumer -- will be thrilled. However, I'll bet you my social security benefits (due in 2019) that you'll never see the price of food in a grocery store decline when farm prices decline. Any takers?

4. Labor unions are the biggest non-governmental threat to farmers and consumers of any outside factors. Whether they strike in the New Orleans docks at harvest time, as they are doing now, or whether they refuse to load wheat for export, as George Meany recently directed them to do, the price of these goods goes up to the consumer and down to the farmer. Farmers and consumers need clout to break the shackles placed on them by the greedy union bosses. Congress has only lately stood up to unions. Will it be able to after 1978?

5. Finally, Mr. Jones, no farmer looks to government loan programs to see which crop to plant, because loan and target prices are so low as to be a joke. A farmer looks to plant whatever he can make the most money growing. Thanks to your bill, he now has to pay interest or opportunity costs on 20% of his farm land, depending upon whether or not his farm is paid for. Farmers are NOT "paying a price because of Earl Butz."

Such payments climbed steadily from 2.5 billion dollars a year in 1965 to a peak of 4 billion in 1972, and dropped to 2.6 billion in 1973.

In the current year, Government checks to farmers are expected to total less than half a billion dollars. Most of that will be paid out under disaster-relief programs to those hit by drought, floods, other catastrophes.

Government no longer stores a glut of grain at taxpayers' expense. At one time, this cost approached 1 million dollars a day. Farmers now hold their own grain until they are ready to sell on the open market.

Most productive industry. Productivity on family farms outstrips that of every other industry in the country. Output per man-hour has increased 65.2 per cent since 1965. By comparison, output per man-hour in U.S. factories is up by 14.6 per cent in that time.

Each farmer produces the food and fiber to supply 49 Americans. On top of that, he turns out the products that move into export markets. Ten years ago, each farmer provided for the needs of 35 people in this country.

To put it another way—there now are 10 per cent more Americans, and they are fed by 22 per cent fewer farmers.

Thanks to this high productivity, American families eat for less of their take-home pay than the people of any other country in the world.

In 1975 the average U.S. family spent 17.1 per cent of its income after taxes on from a low of 16.3 per cent in 1972 and 1973 because of a two-year run-up in food prices.

That still is a bargain when compared with other nations. available figures, 1972, show that the French spend 23.4 per cent of take-home pay on food. In West Germany, the figure is 24.2 per cent, in Japan, 26 per cent, Britain, 29.8 per cent, and Italy 33.6 per cent. In Russia food takes 35 per cent of consumer expenditure.

Farmers are the nation's biggest private spenders, laying out billions for tractors, combines, trucks, fertilizer, fuel, barbed wire and countless other supplies.

In 1975, U.S. farmers had a gross income of 99.2 billion dollars, of which they spent 75.5 billion on production expenses, winding ;up with net realized income of 23.7 billion.

That was considerably under their best year ever, 1973, when net income hit 30 billion dollars.

Average net income per farm in 1975 was $8,440, down from $10,549 in 1973. Such averages are far exceeded by many of the family farms here in mid-America.

Profit picture. The story of one highly capitalized and efficient farm of mor than 1,000 acres in Illinois is reported on page 55.

Not all farmers operate on such a large scale. Vernon and Helen Johnson say that only after 30 years of grinding work are they beginning to make a comfortable living on their place near Boone, Ia. They own 226 acres and rent another 300 acres, feeding a few cattle and raising corn and soybeans that are sold for cash.

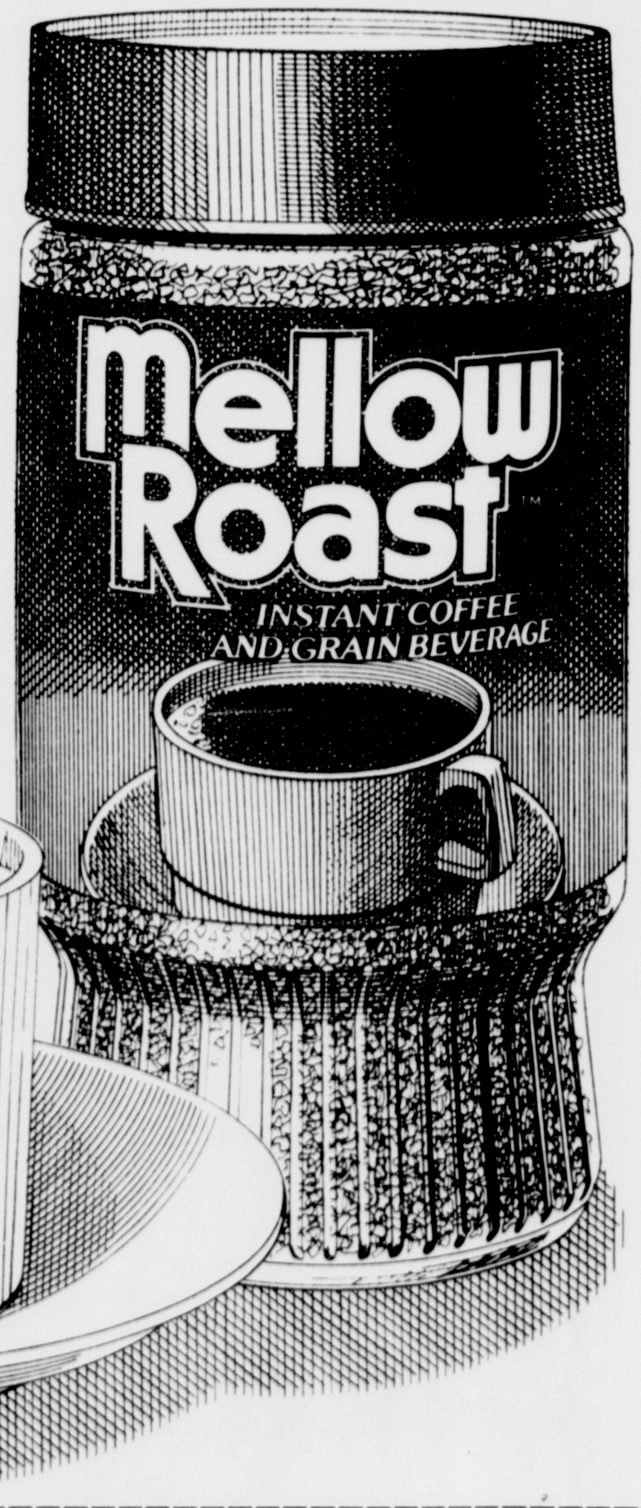

In 1974, the Johnson farm grossed $48,902. By the time

PSC's new utility rules could benefit consumers

By JIM DRINKARD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri utility customers could benefit from three new rules adopted by the Public Service Commission (PSC), which regulates utilities in the state.

The rules set uniform standards for utility billing, prohibit cutoff of electric or gas service during extremely cold weather and prohibit utility companies from passing along to consumers costs for certain types of advertising.

All three measures were announced during the same week PSC chairman James P. Mulvaney announced that he plans to resign from the commission as soon as a replacement can be found by Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale. Mulvaney has been considered a spokesman for consumers on matters before the PSC.

The billing standards rule is the result of a compromise with utility attorneys who raised legal barriers to the rule when it was first proposed in 1975. Major provisions include:

- An extension of the payment period to 21 days before bills become delinquent. Many utilities now have a 10-day grace period.
- Utilities must refund security deposits, with interest, to customers who have a satisfactory payment record for one year.
- Customers who are required to pay deposits during November, December and January can make arrangements to pay the deposit in installments.
- Companies may not estimate bills without reading meters for more than three consecutive months under most circumstances. The customer must be notified and allowed to read his own meter if for some reason the utility cannot make a reading for more than three months.
- Electric, gas and water utilities must distribute an information pamphlet describing utility and customer rights.

The compromise rules are scheduled to go into effect Jan. 13. A public hearing on the changes in billing practices will be held in December in Jefferson City.

Alberta Slavin, a St. Louis consumer advocate who resigned her short-lived PSC term in August to avoid Senate veto of her nomination, praised the compromise.

"I have been very anxious to have these rules in effect. It gives consumers better tools to work with when they have problems with utility companies," Mrs. Slavin said.

She said having a set of uniform statewide rules will eliminate confusion about whether the policies of a particular company are fair. One man had to place a $700 security deposit with Union Electric, she said, and was told it would not be refunded for five years. Such practices would not be allowed under the new regulations.

"Finally people are learning from past mistakes that compromise is going to be beneficial to the consumer as well as to the utilities," she said.

One provision of the rules that was dropped in the compromise would have prevented companies from charging penalties for unpaid bills. Instead, the commission will review each company's policy the next time it asks for a rate increase.

Another new PSC rule will stop gas and electric utilities from discontinuing service to a residential customer on a day when the temperature outdoors drops below freezing without first making personal contact with the customer to notify him that he has five days in which to pay his past due bill.

The utility must also inform the customer that if he is unable to pay his bill, aid may be available from local charitable or social service agencies.

The "cold weather rule" goes into effect Nov. 1.

The commission also proposed guidelines specifying which advertising costs can be charged as operating expenses in determining utility rates.

Informational and promotional advertising will be allowed if it promotes off-peak use of telephone or electric service and does not endanger existing service. The ads must also be consistent with state and national energy conservation efforts.

Advertising which is political or of a public relations nature is disallowed, and must carry a disclaimer stating that the cost of the ad is not being paid by utility customers.

Mulvaney, who was the force behind passage of these and other pro-consumer rules by the commission, said his resignation will not slow the PSC's consumer protection efforts.

"The things we've accomplished will stay, regardless of who's on the commission," Mulvaney said. "The climate dictates it. It's public sentiment. I think some of the utilities are finally starting to realize, 'Hey, we're going to have to start doing some things that we didn't have to do in the good old days, when energy was cheap.'"

U.S.-Soviet hostage swap proposed as nuclear hedge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should the United States swap about a million Americans for an equal number of Russians, with each group serving as hostages in the other's cities?

How about exchanging U.S. and Soviet leaders and using them as hostages so that "neither side would attack the other for fear of killing its own leading citizens"?

These suggestions were among those offered by people responding to an unusual advertisement for ideas on stopping the nuclear weapons cace. The ad was placed by a Pennsylvania political science professor working temporarily at the Pentagon.

Dr. Martin E. Goldstein, who holds the temporary title of assistant to the deputy director for negotiations and arms control, said he drafted the appeal in an effort to generate "a fresh source of ideas" on ways to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

"I asked myself how it would be possible to reach people who have been thinking of this problem but who don't know how to make their views known," said Goldstein, a 37-year-old associate professor at Widner College in Chester, Pa., now at the Pentagon on a fellowship.

"I decided that one way was to put notices in a couple of professional journals. It wouldn't cost the government anything. So last February and March, I put notices in the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists and in PS, journal of the political science community.

A career bureaucrat would be unlikely to do anything like that. But Goldstein said he regards himself as a kind of free soul — "I'm outside the government system, so I could do something like this."

As a result, Goldstein said, he received about 25 written replies ranging from the bizarre to the practical, a number of them accompanied by extensive discussions.

"Some came from fantastic crackpots," Goldstein said. "But there are some from very knowledgeable people."

He has digested and summarized some of the ideas he received and plans to forward them to David McGifford, assistant defense secretary for international security affairs.

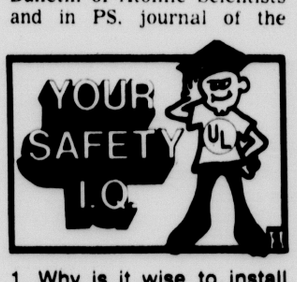

Some of the other suggestions offered:

—"Arouse public awareness of the dangers of nuclear weapons proliferation... by taking rash actions that will reawaken the public's horror of nuclear war. Such actions might include renewal of atmospheric (test) shots, so scheduled as to be tourist attractions."

—"Press the World Bank and other such lending institutions to deny credit to those nations that acquire nuclear weapons."

—"Decrease the number of nuclear warheads in national arsenals by substituting a certain number of "dud" warheads on actual missiles. Since the enemy won't know which warheads are duds, a nation could have the same deterrent with a reduced number of live warheads."

Still others offered ideas on prohibiting production or shipment of nuclear weapons materials, shutting existing nuclear power plants and strengthening international inspection and enforcement powers.

1. Why is it wise to install smoke detectors in every household?
2. Electric cords and cables hung near a swimming pool should be placed above the pool level at least:
   A. 5 feet
   B. 10 feet
   C. 20 feet

ANSWERS

1. Most people who die in home fires are not the victims of flames. They suffocate often while asleep from smoke and poisonous gas asphyxiation. A smoke detector alarm could have awakened them and made escape possible. Use planning and foresight by installing smoke detectors!
2. B. The National Electric Code recommends a spacing of at least 10 feet.

PSC's new utility rules could benefit consumers

By JIM DRINKARD
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri utility customers could benefit from three new rules adopted by the Public Service Commission (PSC), which regulates utilities in the state.

The rules set uniform standards for utility billing, prohibit cutoff of electric or gas service during extremely cold weather and prohibit utility companies from passing along to consumers costs for certain types of advertising.

All three measures were announced during the same week PSC chairman James P. Mulvaney announced that he plans to resign from the commission as soon as a replacement can be found by Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale. Mulvaney has been considered a spokesman for consumers on matters before the PSC.

The billing standards rule is the result of a compromise with utility attorneys who raised legal barriers to the rule when it was first proposed in 1975. Major provisions include:

WASHINGTON (AP) — Should the United States swap about a million Americans for an equal number of Russians, with each group serving as hostages in the other's cities?

How about exchanging U.S. and Soviet leaders and using them as hostages so that "neither side would attack the other for fear of killing its own leading citizens"?

These suggestions were among those offered by people responding to an unusual advertisement for ideas on stopping the nuclear weapons cace. The ad was placed by a Pennsylvania political science professor working temporarily at the Pentagon.

Dr. Martin E. Goldstein, who holds the temporary title of assistant to the deputy director for negotiations and arms control, said he drafted the appeal in an effort to generate "a fresh source of ideas" on ways to stop the spread of nuclear weapons.

"I asked myself how it would be possible to reach people who have been thinking of this problem but who don't know how to make their views known," said Goldstein, a 37-year-old associate professor at Widner College in Chester, Pa., now at the Pentagon on a fellowship.

"I decided that one way was to put notices in a couple of professional journals. It wouldn't cost the government anything. So last February and March, I put notices in the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists and in PS, journal of the political science community.

A career bureaucrat would be unlikely to do anything like that. But Goldstein said he regards himself as a kind of free soul — "I'm outside the government system, so I could do something like this."

As a result, Goldstein said, he received about 25 written replies ranging from the bizarre to the practical, a number of them accompanied by extensive discussions.

"Some came from fantastic crackpots," Goldstein said. "But there are some from very knowledgeable people."

He has digested and summarized some of the ideas he received and plans to forward them to David McGifford, assistant defense secretary for international security affairs.

Some of the other suggestions offered:

—"Arouse public awareness of the dangers of nuclear weapons proliferation by taking rash actions that will reawaken the public's horror of nuclear war. Such actions might include renewal of atmospheric (test) shots, so scheduled as to be tourist attractions."

—"Press the World Bank and other such lending institutions to deny credit to those nations that acquire nuclear weapons."

—"Decrease the number of nuclear warheads in national arsenals by substituting a certain number of "dud" warheads on actual missiles. Since the enemy won't know which warheads are duds, a nation could have the same deterrent with a reduced number of live warheads."

Still others offered ideas on prohibiting production or shipment of nuclear weapons materials, shutting existing nuclear power plants and strengthening international inspection and enforcement powers.

Sirs:

Just for the record, so to speak, want to send my list of words, from the "Spellbinder", that I enjoy so much -- I'm always doing that from words at random. As a rule I always make more words than I have lines to put them on. I think it's fantastic to do in spare time.

Aspirate is the word! My two words, Asp-irate.

Aster spirea pies ires tripe arts strip pirate rate tries site aper stripe pear rasp tire sire area sprite peat reap tape astir stair pest rape taper spit stare part rips tarp stpie stir past ripe trap spire strap paste raise eats spear sate prat rise east spar seat prate rites erst spare pies irate trip tear

I love Cross-word puzzles, so therefore, is where some of my words are from.

I assure you, I do not look up my words from the Dictionary -- Would take the fun and sport from the game.

Thanks for taking time to read this. The rest of the puzzles are fun too.

Just wanted you to know how much I enjoy your paper.

Thanks Again
Sincerely
Mrs. Arthur Pfuehler

1. Why is it wise to install smoke detectors in every household?
2. Electric cords and cables hung near a swimming pool should be placed above the pool level at least:
   A. 5 feet
   B. 10 feet
   C. 20 feet

ANSWERS

1. Most people who die in home fires are not the victims of flames. They suffocate often while asleep from smoke and poisonous gas asphyxiation. A smoke detector alarm could have awakened them and made escape possible. Use planning and foresight by installing smoke detectors!
2. B. The National Electric Code recommends a spacing of at least 10 feet.

New Tender Chunk™ Ham. It does everything tuna does except swim.

What a great idea. Real honest-to-goodness ham you can flake with a fork just like tuna and use in sandwiches, salads, casseroles and hors d'oeuvres. Of course, any good lean ham costs more than tuna, but just to prove you'll like Tender Chunk Ham, we've thrown in this special offer. Look for Tender Chunk in your supermarket next to the tuna section.

In a weakly contested game Friday night at Jackson, the Sikeston Bulldogs won their fourth Big Eight conference victory by a score of 19-0.

Other scores include: Kennett 7, Cape Central 0; Malden 25, East Prairie 6; Portageville 51, Dexter 0; Hayti 21, Corning, Ark., 0; and Poplar Bluff 35, Charleston 13.

Newton pays tribute to Elvis at benefit show

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "The only thing that really matters in this life is the hearts and the souls that we touch along the way."

Eyes moist, his voice trembling slightly, entertainer Wayne Newton told Saturday night how those words he penned a year ago apply to a friend he's lost and an ongoing campaign for an Indian orphanage he happened on as a teenager.

Speaking to a sellout audience at a benefit for the American Diabetes Association, Newton used the line to preface a tribute to Elvis Presley. After the show, he recalled how he wrote the line when everyone was taking shots at Presley, saying he'd peaked and would never be the same entertainer he once was.

Midway through a four-city swing at his own expense that will gross the Diabetes Association $1 million, Newton said he was irritated with Presley's detractors.

"I realized they'd missed the contributions he'd made through life," Newton said. "He was truly one of the nicest people I'd ever known. Not only was he a dear friend, he was a kind, compassionate man."

Newton's two sellout concerts here Saturday night were preceded by a concert in Nashville, and followed by a show Sunday night in Wichita and one scheduled for Monday night in Omaha.

Why would a millionaire singer at the zenith of a second career, who's entertained a record six million people in Nevada clubs, take to the road with 22 of his people, at his own expense, when his schedule is one of the most grueling of anyone in show business?

"It's time for another miracle," Newton answered, talking about the fight against diabetes. "People don't realize it, but diabetes is the largest contributor to blindness in adults...and 25 per cent of American Indian adults die of the disease."

He said contrary to some stories, no one in his family has diabetes. Newton, who is half Indian, (25 per cent Cherokee, 25 per cent Powhatan) said he learned of the severity of the disease when doing a benefit for a friend last year.

His offer to help the association carried the same condition all other Newton charity benefits have over the years — that a donation from each show be made to the St. John's Indian orphanage in Laveen, Ariz.

Newton's love-affair with the orphanage began when, as a teenage idol and high school freshman who had his own television show in Phoenix, he was asked to entertain at the home one Christmas.

"I was so impressed," he recalled in a conversation following Saturday night's second show. "The kids helped build the buildings themselves. It was a Catholic school that took in kids that were literally starving. They ranged in age from 18 months to 18 years. The kids were perfect ladies and gentlemen — no smart alecks like so many of the kids I was running into at that time."

Today the home includes 280 orphans and another 180 kids who spend most of the year there.

Newton charity benefits and other gifts channeled through the entertainer to the orphanage provide income ranging from $50,000 to $100,000 a year, estimates Jay Stream, Newton's business manager.

Last year he worked 23 weeks straight without a day off. He's likely to surpass that mark this year — having already worked 16 weeks without letup and no time off until Christmas Day. After Omaha, he's scheduled to head back to Nevada, and a three-week stint at Harrah's-Lake Tahoe before returning to his popular haunt — The Sands in Las Vegas beginning Nov. 23.

In Las Vegas are his wife, Elaine, a former Pan Am stewardess he met in 1966 when returning from a trip to entertain American troops in southeast Asia, and daughter Erin, 15 months.

Newton's eyes gleamed when he talked of their daughter.

"The big problem now is keeping her away from the horses," he laughed, referring to the thoroughbred Arabians raised on his two ranches. Mother and daughter returned home last week after accompanying him on part of his current eight-week cross-country jaunt which included taping upcoming television specials in Nashville and at Sea World in Orlando, Fla. Such trips are made in his Citation jet, which he's learning to pilot, while trips between ranches are in a helicopter he flies himself.

Newton, 35, said meeting his rigorous schedule is a case of mind over matter. His early conditioning included a fiveyear stint when he first began working Las Vegas, doing six shows a night, six nights a week at the Fremont Hotel.

Today, in the midst of a six-year, multi-million dollar pact with the Suma Corporation and its Hughes hotels, he's considered the premier entertainer in a city of show business giants, logging more than 40 weeks of work a year, seven days a week.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Farmers can now plug information into a preprogrammed pocket calculator to find the answer to such questins as how much feed their animals need for proper weight gain.

"It takes some of the formulas and equations that have been derived through science and research and puts them into a usuable form," said Gene Rouse, an extension livestock specialist at Iowa State University.

Rouse said the concept of using a programmable calculator as a farm tool was developed at ISU about a year ago and has drawn considerable interest from the feed industry. But Rouse said he did not believe the idea has been adopted in other states on a large scale.

The calculators look much like the ones now found in nearly every American home. But they can be programmed to solve specific problems.

"We write the program code on a sheet of paper, then the producer buys a blank magnetic tape and stores the information on it for future use," said Rouse. "The tape is about the size of a stick of gum and slips right into the calculator.

"Programs have been written in a number of areas," said Rouse. "We just went to print with a manual about two weeks ago that will be available within a month. It has all programs written in it for use by producers."

Programs available solve such problems as computing net energy requirements for feeding cattle and hogs, how much land would have to produce to pay for itself, the cost and returns of storing corn, and farm machinery costs.

Rouse said the calculator costs about $229 and comes with 40 blank tapes so the farmer can tailor his own programming needs.

"We think there's been a couple of hundred of them sold to Iowa cattle feeders," said Rouse. "Feed companies have bought several for their field men. They're waiting for the written programs.

"A new model is being developed that uses a module. It can store up to 25 programs and would take some of the frustrations out of using the individual tapes.

"It would cost less than $100 and the module would only be about $30-35. But it is not expected to be on sale for quite some time."

Attempted kill leads to jail

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Chubby had a lot more hulk than he had brains. Although he was intent upon "blowing away" an adversary named Bruno, for all he accomplished after blasting him with a .38, Chubby might just as well have splashed him with a water pistol. Someone else beat him to the hill 5 minutes earlier and, consequently, when Chubby pumped 5 slugs into him, Bruno didn't even say "Ouch!"

And, if that wasn't disconcerting enough, picture Chubby's consternation when he was later picked up by the police on charges of attempted murder.

"You guys gotta' be kidding," protested Chubby to the arresting cops. "If you can't kill a corpse, how can you attempt to kill a corpse?"

"That's easy!" responded a police officer. "When you air-conditioned Bruno you didn't know he was already dead. You tried your best and that's what counts."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Chubby of attempted murder?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that under the law in this state a person is guilty of an attempt when, with the intent to commit a crime, he engages in such conduct which tends to effect the commission of that crime. In this case, concluded the judge, Chubby believed that Bruno was alive when he shot him and did all that was necessary to carry out his intent to murder him.

Fowler Legend Colorful, Yet Misses Main Point

THE LIFE AND LEGEND OF GENE FOWLER. By H. Allen Smith. Morrow. 320 Pages. $10

There's something vital missing from this examination of newspaperman, screen-writer, book author Gene Fowler. His writing.

It's primarily a collection of stories about his drinking, barroom brawling episodes and his sexual escapades. Funny and colorful ones.

But what about the generation that never saw the thing that made Fowler so special? His writing! Smith includes only a few samples, the most thorough being Fowler's description of the execution of two criminals. Fowler dictated the dramatic moment spontaneously under deadline pressure and his story was excellent but hardly a reflective and comprehensive example of Fowler's talents.

So, if you're looking at this work as a means of seeing the total man you'll be disappointed. But if you like to read about saloon antics, then you're in for a treat.

Newton pays tribute to . Elvis at benefit show

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "The only thing that really matters in this life is the hearts and the souls that we touch along the way."

Eyes moist, his voice trembling slightly, entertainer Wayne Newton told Saturday night how those words he penned a year ago apply to a friend he's lost and an ongoing campaign for an Indian orphanage he happened on as a teenager.

Speaking to a sellout audience at a benefit for the American Diabetes Association, Newton used the line to preface a tribute to Elvis Presley. After the show, he recalled how he wrote the line when everyone was taking shots at Presley, saying he'd peaked and would never be the same entertainer he once was.

Midway through a four-city swing at his own expense that will gross the Diabetes Association $1 million, Newton said he was irritated with Presley's detractors.

"I realized they'd missed the contributions he'd made through life," Newton said. "He was truly one of the nicest people I'd ever known. Not only was he a dear friend, he was a kind, compassionate man."

Newton's two sellout concerts here Saturday night were preceded by a concert in Nashville, and followed by a show Sunday night in Wichita and one scheduled for Monday night in Omaha.

Why would a millionaire singer at the zenith of a second career, who's entertained a record six million people in Nevada clubs, take to the road with 22 of his people, at his own expense, when his schedule is one of the most grueling of anyone in show business?

"It's time for another miracle," Newton answered, talking about the fight against diabetes. "People don't realize it, but diabetes is the largest contributor to blindness in adults...and 25 per cent of American Indian adults die of the disease."

He said contrary to some stories, no one in his family has diabetes. Newton, who is half Indian, (25 per cent Cherokee, 25 per cent Powhatan) said he learned of the severity of the disease when doing a benefit for a friend last year.

His offer to help the association carried the same condition all other Newton charity benefits have over the years — that a donation from each show be made to the St. John's Indian orphanage in Laveen, Ariz.

Newton's love-affair with the orphanage began when, as a teenage idol and high school freshman who had his own television show in Phoenix, he was asked to entertain at the home one Christmas.

"I was so impressed," he recalled in a conversation following Saturday night's second show. "The kids helped build the buildings themselves. It was a Catholic school that took in kids that were literally starving. They ranged in age from 18 months to 18 years. The kids were perfect ladies and gentlemen — no smart alecks like so many of the kids I was running into at that time."

Today the home includes 280 orphans and another 180 kids who spend most of the year there.

Newton charity benefits and other gifts channeled through the entertainer to the orphanage provide income ranging from $50,000 to $100,000 a year, estimates Jay Stream, Newton's business manager.

Last year he worked 23 weeks straight without a day off. He's likely to surpass that mark this year — having already worked 16 weeks without letup and no time off until Christmas Day. After Omaha, he's scheduled to head back to Nevada, and a three-week stint at Harrah's-Lake Tahoe before returning to his popular haunt — The Sands in Las Vegas beginning Nov. 23.

In Las Vegas are his wife, Elaine, a former Pan Am stewardess he met in 1966 when returning from a trip to entertain American troops in southeast Asia, and daughter Erin, 15 months.

Newton's eyes gleamed when he talked of their daughter.

"The big problem now is keeping her away from the horses," he laughed, referring to the thoroughbred Arabians raised on his two ranches. Mother and daughter returned home last week after accompanying him on part of his current eight-week cross-country jaunt which included taping upcoming television specials in Nashville and at Sea World in Orlando, Fla. Such trips are made in his Citation jet, which he's learning to pilot, while trips between ranches are in a helicopter he flies himself.

Newton, 35, said meeting his rigorous schedule is a case of mind over matter. His early conditioning included a fiveyear stint when he first began working Las Vegas, doing six shows a night, six nights a week at the Fremont Hotel.

Today, in the midst of a six-year, multi-million dollar pact with the Suma Corporation and its Hughes hotels, he's considered the premier entertainer in a city of show business giants, logging more than 40 weeks of work a year, seven days a week.

Calculator now being viewed as farm tool

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Farmers can now plug information into a preprogrammed pocket calculator to find the answer to such questins as how much feed their animals need for proper weight gain.

"It takes some of the formulas and equations that have been derived through science and research and puts them into a usuable form," said Gene Rouse, an extension livestock specialist at Iowa State University.

Rouse said the concept of using a programmable calculator as a farm tool was developed at ISU about a year ago and has drawn considerable interest from the feed industry. But Rouse said he did not believe the idea has been adopted in other states on a large scale.

The calculators look much like the ones now found in nearly every American home. But they can be programmed to solve specific problems.

"A house of STRAW? Sounds like a real firetrap!"

DOONESBURY by Garry Trudeau

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 2, the 306th day of 1977. There are 59 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1962, President John Kennedy announced that Soviet missile bases in Cuba were being dismantled.

On this date:

In 1782, Gen. George Washington delivered his farewell address to the Army near Princeton, N.J.

In 1889, North Dakota and South Dakota became the 39th and 40th states of the Union.

In 1920, radio station KDKA in Pittsburgh began the first regular schedule of broadcasting. It reported election returns in which Warren Harding was elected president.

In 1930, Haile Selassie was crowned emperor of Ethiopia.

In 1942, German troops under Field Marshal Erwin Rommel began a retreat from El Alamein in the African desert.

In 1948, Harry Truman was elected president against heavy odds.

Ten years ago: White mercenaries and black troops invaded the Congo from Portuguese Angola.

One year ago: Jimmy Carter eked out a narrow victory over President Gerald Ford and was elected the new president of the United States.

Today's birthday: Actor Burt Lancaster is 64 years old.

Thought for today: Only in growth, reform and change is true security to be found — Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 2, the 306th day of 1977. There are 59 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1962, President John Kennedy announced that Soviet missile bases in Cuba were being dismantled.

On this date:

In 1782, Gen. George Washington delivered his farewell address to the Army near Princeton, N.J.

In 1889, North Dakota and South Dakota became the 39th and 40th states of the Union.

In 1920, radio station KDKA in Pittsburgh began the first regular schedule of broadcasting. It reported election returns in which Warren Harding was elected president.

In 1930, Haile Selassie was crowned emperor of Ethiopia.

In 1942, German troops under Field Marshal Erwin Rommel began a retreat from El Alamein in the African desert.

In 1948, Harry Truman was elected president against heavy odds.

Ten years ago: White mercenaries and black troops invaded the Congo from Portuguese Angola.

Five years ago: American Indian activists seized control of the Bureau of Indian Affairs building in Washington and demanded reforms.

One year ago: Jimmy Carter eked out a narrow victory over President Gerald Ford and was elected the new president of the United States.

Today's birthday: Actor Burt Lancaster is 64 years old.

Thought for today: Only in growth, reform and change is true security to be found — Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

expenses and taxes were paid, they were left with a net income of $12,353.

In 1975, the Johnsons' gross income jumped by more than $14,000 to $63,637. But expenses and taxes increased so much that net income was trimmed to $16,192. Mr. Johnson figures that gave him a return of about 5 per cent on his total investment.

Vernon Johnson has talked about expanding the size of his farm but decided against it. He says:

"If I rented more acreage, I'd have to hire more help and I wouldn't be able to get the same percentage return on my investment. I would also have to buy more equipment. It seems to me that when you farm too big, you end up working for the farm- equipment companies and not yourself.

"The stakes in this business are getting too high for comfort. It used to be when spring came around I was content if I had a couple thousand dollars in the bank. But today, with the high cost of chemicals, fuel and fertilizer, I can't plant my farm unless I have at least $15,000 on hand. As a matter of fact, I just spent $1,500 today so I'll be able to sleep better this summer—I bought hail insurance."

Mr. Johnson like most farmers, is angry over what he sees as undue influence by Government, big grain dealers and meat-packers on the prices he gets. His attitude helps explain why President Ford appears to be in trouble across the farm belt.

Farmers are still bitter over the President's moratorium on grain sales to Russia last autumn. At that time prices plunged and have not yet recovered to earlier levels.

"It was a sellout to labor, who thought it would mean lower food prices," says Mr. Johnson, "and I probably won't vote for Ford, even if he is nominated."

Recurrent fears that corporation farming will take over in the U.S. are brushed aside by those who till the land and by economists who know the business from first-hand experience. Says Don Paarlberg, No. 1 economist in the U.S. Department of Aghriculture:

"The family farm has great resilence. In hard times, the family farmer can tighten his belt, work for nothing. He will hold onto his land for a return of as little as 3 to 4 per cent -- less if need be.

"The corporation farm can't do that. Its workers punch a time clock. They won't stay up all night to plant a corn crop or tend a sow through farrowing a litter of pigs. If they don't get paid, they quit. The trend corporation farming in this country will be gradual, selective, but never total. In some types, where costs can be rigidly controled, corporations, will do well. They have almost totally taken over production of broiler chickens. They do well in California where irrigation takes the weather risk out of farming. But in many places, the corporations have fallen flat on their faces."

Passing it on. There are growing numbers of incorporated farms in the U.S., Paarlberg notes, but 9 out of 10 of them are farm families that have incorporated to facilitate passing on the business to heirs.

More young people are entering or staying in agriculture. Not long ago, the average age of farm operators was 52 years. Now that is dropping. Almost 20 per cent of farm operrators now are under 35 years of age, compared with 15 per cent in 1970.

The future appears bright for farmers—and for their customers at home and abroad. The Agriculture Department projects that U.S. farmers -- with persent techmology -- can by 1985 in crease production of wheat and feed grains by 50 per cent, soybeans by one third and beef output by 40 per cent.

And the American farmer will do better than that if agricultural scientist come up with promised new varieties of hybrid seed, new livestock management practices and improved cropping techniques.

Above all, the ever-growing stength of agriculture is based on a renewable resource. This spring you can see that renewal here in mid-America where new crops of wheat, corn, feed grains, soybeans, calves, pigs and chicks are again creating new wealth for America.

W. Robert Shoup of the magazine's Chicago bureau and Grant A. Salisbury assistand managing editor, prepared the preceding article.

IN THE CORN BELT
A Spread Valued In the Millions
Butler Grove Township Ill.

Typical of highly capitalized and efficient farm operations in mid-America is the 1,300-acre Evergreen Farms, Inc., run by Jack Rundquist and family.

Located about 35 miles south of Springfield, the farm is on the southern edge of the belt of fertile land that last year made Illinois the top corn-growing State in the nation.

The investment. With land prices in this area now around $2,000 an acre, Evergreen Farms is worth at least 2.5 million dollars. Mr. Rundquist probably has another quarter of a million tied up in equipment—six tractors, a combine, plows, planters, trucks and automated feed-storage, mixing and delivery systems..

Gross sales are in the range of "several hundred thousand dollars" a year. Mr. Fundquist acknowledges. But that is not the whole story he says:

"When you sell a load of cattle it looks like an awful lot of money. Then you figure how you paid for the steers and what it cost to feed them up to size."

He also cites estimates that costs $200 to plant an acre of corn when spending is totaled for seed, fertilizer, herbicides and fuel. At that rate, he will have $160,000 invested in this year's 800-acre corn crop alone.

Mr. Rundquist marketed about 2,700 hogs last year and 900 beef cattle. Pork production should be about the same this year, he says, but the volume of cattle should be higher under the current market conditions.

Two huge buildings house the separate pork and beef-production "factories." The pig shed accommodates about 1,200 at at time, ranging in size from tiny piglets to 200-pounders ready for the trip to market. Up to 800 cattle can be housed in the other building.

Diets, including the proper vitamins and minerals, are calculated by computer. Feed for the pigs is blown through buried pipes from a mixing building to automatic feeders in the pens. Content is varied according to size of the pigs.

Wagons equipped with electronic scales help Mr. Rundquist and his three full-time employes measure out proper rations for the steers.

Both buildings have slatted floors over large tanks where waste materials are collected. This is pumped out periodical-through long hoses to help fertilize surrounding fields.

To meet his feed requirents, Mr. Rundquist will plant 800 acres of corn this year and will buy some. For cash crops, he has 200 acres in soybeans, 200 in wheat--and hopes to plant a second crop of soybeans in the wheat stubble after harvest if the weather co-operates.

Cost-price squeeze. The last few years have been good for most farmers in Illinois. But there have been some dark spots. Mr. Rundquist says he "took a beating" on cattle in 1974, when he and other feeders got caught in the squeeze between soaring grain costs and price controls on beef. He cut back his cattle feeding by 75 per cent for a while, but began filling up the feeding barn again last September. He looks for rising beef prices through the summer which should mean a profit for him.

Mr. Rundquist is sold on farming as a way of life. He is waiting for his son John—who graduates from the University of Illinois this year but plans another year of graduate study—to join him full time. Rundquists also have four daughters— one married, two in college, one still in high school.

Mr. Rundquist has just finished a six-year term on the advisory board of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture. He also is vice president of the Illinois Pork Producers--a post that rates him a special PORK license plate on his car.

Soviet SST launches passenger service

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's supersonic Tu-144 jetliner began its first scheduled passenger service with a twohour flight to Soviet Central Asia today, 21 months behind its Western rival, the AngloFrench Concorde.

The slim white plane emblazoned with the red hammerand-sickle flag of the Soviet Union roared into the overcast Moscow sky just after dawn, carrying reporters, Soviet officials and Alexei A. Tupolev, the plane's 52-year-old designer.

The 140-seat jet landed exactly two hours later in Alma Ata, 1992 miles to the east.

By the fastest conventional Soviet airliner, the run takes four hours and 20 minutes — more than twice the time of today's flight.

Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, announced that the Tu-144 would carry passengers on the Moscow-Alma Ata run once a week. The plane began freight and mail service between the two cities in December 1975.

Reporters on the flight today said the plane made a sharp climb out of Moscow but soon leveled into a smooth flight, and the hostesses served caviar, wine and cognac.

Trouble with an airport boarding ramp forced pilot Boris F. Kuznetsov to delay takeoff from Moscow's Domodedovo airport about 10 minutes. The delay appeared to anger Civil Aviation Minister Boris P. Bugaev, who was on the runway for a brief takeoff ceremony.

Only the British and French national airlines have bought Concordes so far, and those nations have decided to stop production at the 16 already authorized. The Soviet government made early attempts to get foreign buyers without any indications of orders, and it is expected to resume the sales campaign now that the plane is in service.

Aeroflot also hopes to expand supersonic service eventually to international routes to competite with the Concorde.

The Tu-144 made its first prototype flight Dec. 31, 1968. It was the first flight by a supersonic passenger liner anywhere in the world. But the plane was plagued for years afterward by technical problems, including high fuel consumption and vibration.

One prototype crashed at the Paris air show in June 1973, killing 13 people including six crew members as 30,000 spectators watched.

The Concorde, which began passenger service in January 1976, carries 100 to 128 passengers. That is 22 to 40 fewer than the Tu-144, which at 215½ feet long and 95½ feet wide is a bit larger both ways. The two planes have nearly equal cruising speeds of about 1,400 miles per hour — nearly twice the speed of sound — and ranges of 4,000 miles.

But a one-way Moscow-Alma Ata ticket will cost the equivalent of $111 at the official dollar-ruble rate of exchange, or about 5½ cents a mile, while the one-way Concorde fare from Britain to the United States costs 23¼ cents a mile.

Spreading drug problem may need new approach

By JESSE W. BUNN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The trend toward increasing alcohol and drug abuse throughout Missouri is best attacked at the community level, says Dr. William Lerner, director of the state Division of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

And he believes social approaches, as opposed to legal action, are the keys in overcoming the problems. "Society some day must come to grips with the question if it will remain a drug culture or if we're going to do something about it," Dr. Lerner says. "It can only be solved in the community."

As director of alcoholism and drug abuse, Dr. Lerner works to establish local programs for treatment and detection, and he says rural areas are particularly lacking in establishing programs. "I'm very concerned about rural areas," he says. "There are a lot of drug abusers out there who want help and can't get it."

Programs to help abusers should work where legal action has not, he says. "Abuse is a social problem not handled by laws," he says. "Legal approaches have been utter and abysmal failures."

Problems from alcoholism and drug abuse cost Missourians about $700 million annually, Dr. Lerner says.

Included in his estimate are costs incurred in hospital care, lost employment, money used illegally to purchase drugs and alcohol, upkeep of state inmates and legal fees. "Seven hundred million dollars is what the problem of alcohol and drug abuse costs the state, and that's conservative," Dr. Lerner says.

And the situation is not improving. Judging from indicators such as drug-related deaths, arrest records, losses of controlled substances, and admissions and readmissions to state mental health centers, Dr. Lerner says there is evidence of increasing alcoholism and drug abuse throughout the state. "All these things have gone up. In Missouri, a good estimate is there are from 300,000 to 350,000 people with drug and alcohol problems," he says.

Narcotics and alcohol, whether legal or illegal, are available almost anywhere in Missouri, Dr. Lerner says. "We used to think of the drug addict as an inner-city guy on heroin and as we've begun to approach the problem, we've found the heroin addict represents a minority," he says.

Drugs are in "pretty good supply" all over the state, he says.

"Marijuana is like cake," he says. "It's just about available on any street corner. And legal drugs are readily available. Kids just take them out of mama and daddy's medicine cabinet."

Alcohol and marijuana are the two most abused substances, Dr. Lerner says, but a relatively new drug is coming into prominent usage.

It's called PCP and is derived from an animal tranquilizer. "Teenagers have been scared away from LSD and speed, but they're still using tranquilizers. The new one is called PCP or angel's dust. It's an animal tranquilizer, and it's a little hallucinogenic," Dr. Lerner says. The reason for its popularity is it is easy to manufacture. "A fair chemist can make a batch of the stuff in four hours," Dr. Lerner says. And it is inexpensive, "about a buck a dose."

But illegal drugs are not the primary source of abuse. "The problem is more legal drugs are being abused than illegal drugs," Dr. Lerner says, citing Valium as a prime example. "What amazes me is why more people don't get addicted."

A principal reason for legal drug abuse is the apparent willingness of many physicians to prescribe tranquilizers, Dr. Lerner says. "Physicians are exceedingly busy and often use prescriptions instead of therapeutic sessions."

Society has forced the doctor into a role of pill pusher, Dr. Lerner says. "We have a pill for every pain. I think we ought to be giving out pills to correct a function, not to deal with a pain perception," Dr. Lerner says. "The doctor reflects society in which he lives, and society wants a cure for pain."

'White Holes' Not Very Interesting

WHITE HOLES. By John Gribbin. Delacorte. 250 Pages. $8.95.

It seems almost impossible that someone could take a potentially fascinating topic such as the beginning, or future, of the universe and make it dull.

But John Gribbin has done that.

What is supposed to be a sort of a challenge to the theory of "black holes" reads like little more than a series of revised lectures bound up for public consumption.

Some scientists believe that stars collapse into themselves and the result becomes an incredibly powerful mass of gravitational energy. Hence "black holes." A study of this theory once said that collapsed gravity is so heavy that a spoonful would go completely through the planet earth.

Gribbin writes, however, about the opposite, that the universe is a growing body because of a gushing energy from "white holes."

Wagons equipped with electronic scales help Mr. Rundquist and his three full-time employes measure out proper rations for the steers.

Both buildings have slatted floors over large tanks where waste materials are collected. This is pumped out periodical-through long hoses to help fertilize surrounding fields.

To meet his feed requirents, Mr. Rundquist will plant 800 acres of corn this year and will buy some. For cash crops, he has 200 acres in soybeans, 200 in wheat--and hopes to plant a second crop of soybeans in the wheat stubble after harvest if the weather co-operates.

Cost-price squeeze. The last few years have been good for most farmers in Illinois. But there have been some dark spots. Mr. Rundquist says he "took a beating" on cattle in 1974, when he and other feeders got caught in the squeeze between soaring grain costs and price controls on beef. He cut back his cattle feeding by 75 per cent for a while, but began filling up the feeding barn again last September. He looks for rising beef prices through the summer which should mean a profit for him.

Mr. Rundquist is sold on farming as a way of life. He is waiting for his son John—who graduates from the University of Illinois this year but plans another year of graduate study—to join him full time. Rundquists also have four daughters— one married, two in college, one still in high school.

Mr. Rundquist has just finished a six-year term on the advisory board of the University of Illinois College of Agriculture. He also is vice president of the Illinois Pork Producers--a post that rates him a special PORK license plate on his car.

Soviet SST launches passenger service

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's supersonic Tu-144 jetliner began its first scheduled passenger service with a twohour flight to Soviet Central Asia today, 21 months behind its Western rival, the AngloFrench Concorde.

The slim white plane emblazoned with the red hammerand-sickle flag of the Soviet Union roared into the overcast Moscow sky just after dawn, carrying reporters, Soviet officials and Alexei A. Tupolev, the plane's 52-year-old designer.

The 140-seat jet landed exactly two hours later in Alma Ata, 1992 miles to the east.

By the fastest conventional Soviet airliner, the run takes four hours and 20 minutes — more than twice the time of today's flight.

Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, announced that the Tu-144 would carry passengers on the Moscow-Alma Ata run once a week. The plane began freight and mail service between the two cities in December 1975.

Reporters on the flight today said the plane made a sharp climb out of Moscow but soon leveled into a smooth flight, and the hostesses served caviar, wine and cognac.

Trouble with an airport boarding ramp forced pilot Boris F. Kuznetsov to delay takeoff from Moscow's Domodedovo airport about 10 minutes. The delay appeared to anger Civil Aviation Minister Boris P. Bugaev, who was on the runway for a brief takeoff ceremony.

Only the British and French national airlines have bought Concordes so far, and those nations have decided to stop production at the 16 already authorized. The Soviet government made early attempts to get foreign buyers without any indications of orders, and it is expected to resume the sales campaign now that the plane is in service.

Aeroflot also hopes to expand supersonic service eventually to international routes to competite with the Concorde.

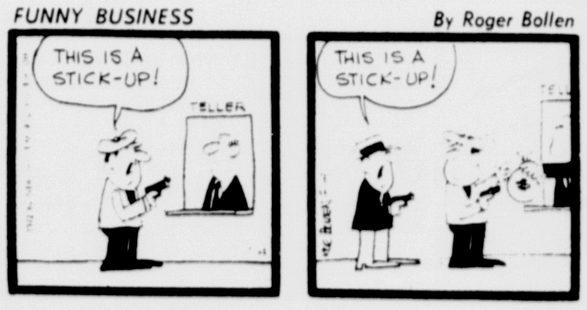

The Tu-144 made its first prototype flight Dec. 31, 1968. It was the first flight by a supersonic passenger liner anywhere in the world. But the plane was plagued for years afterward by technical problems, including high fuel consumption and vibration.

One prototype crashed at the Paris air show in June 1973, killing 13 people including six crew members as 30,000 spectators watched.

The Concorde, which began passenger service in January 1976, carries 100 to 128 passengers. That is 22 to 40 fewer than the Tu-144, which at 215½ feet long and 95½ feet wide is a bit larger both ways. The two planes have nearly equal cruising speeds of about 1,400 miles per hour — nearly twice the speed of sound — and ranges of 4,000 miles.

But a one-way Moscow-Alma Ata ticket will cost the equivalent of $111 at the official dollar-ruble rate of exchange, or about 5½ cents a mile, while the one-way Concorde fare from Britain to the United States costs 23¼ cents a mile.

Spreading drug problem may need new approach

By JESSE W. BUNN
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — The trend toward increasing alcohol and drug abuse throughout Missouri is best attacked at the community level, says Dr. William Lerner, director of the state Division of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

And he believes social approaches, as opposed to legal action, are the keys in overcoming the problems. "Society some day must come to grips with the question if it will remain a drug culture or if we're going to do something about it," Dr. Lerner says. "It can only be solved in the community."

As director of alcoholism and drug abuse, Dr. Lerner works to establish local programs for treatment and detection, and he says rural areas are particularly lacking in establishing programs. "I'm very concerned about rural areas," he says. "There are a lot of drug abusers out there who want help and can't get it."

Programs to help abusers should work where legal action has not, he says. "Abuse is a social problem not handled by laws," he says. "Legal approaches have been utter and abysmal failures."

Problems from alcoholism and drug abuse cost Missourians about $700 million annually, Dr. Lerner says.

Included in his estimate are costs incurred in hospital care, lost employment, money used illegally to purchase drugs and alcohol, upkeep of state inmates and legal fees. "Seven hundred million dollars is what the problem of alcohol and drug abuse costs the state, and that's conservative," Dr. Lerner says.

And the situation is not improving. Judging from indicators such as drug-related deaths, arrest records, losses of controlled substances, and admissions and readmissions to state mental health centers, Dr. Lerner says there is evidence of increasing alcoholism and drug abuse throughout the state. "All these things have gone up. In Missouri, a good estimate is there are from 300,000 to 350,000 people with drug and alcohol problems," he says.

Narcotics and alcohol, whether legal or illegal, are available almost anywhere in Missouri, Dr. Lerner says. "We used to think of the drug addict as an inner-city guy on heroin and as we've begun to approach the problem, we've found the heroin addict represents a minority," he says.

Drugs are in "pretty good supply" all over the state, he says.

"Marijuana is like cake," he says. "It's just about available on any street corner. And legal drugs are readily available. Kids just take them out of mama and daddy's medicine cabinet."

Alcohol and marijuana are the two most abused substances, Dr. Lerner says, but a relatively new drug is coming into prominent usage.

It's called PCP and is derived from an animal tranquilizer. "Teenagers have been scared away from LSD and speed, but they're still using tranquilizers. The new one is called PCP or angel's dust. It's an animal tranquilizer, and it's a little hallucinogenic," Dr. Lerner says. The reason for its popularity is it is easy to manufacture. "A fair chemist can make a batch of the stuff in four hours," Dr. Lerner says. And it is inexpensive, "about a buck a dose."

But illegal drugs are not the primary source of abuse. "The problem is more legal drugs are being abused than illegal drugs," Dr. Lerner says, citing Valium as a prime example. "What amazes me is why more people don't get addicted."

A principal reason for legal drug abuse is the apparent willingness of many physicians to prescribe tranquilizers, Dr. Lerner says. "Physicians are exceedingly busy and often use prescriptions instead of therapeutic sessions."

Society has forced the doctor into a role of pill pusher, Dr. Lerner says. "We have a pill for every pain. I think we ought to be giving out pills to correct a function, not to deal with a pain perception," Dr. Lerner says. "The doctor reflects society in which he lives, and society wants a cure for pain."

'White Holes' Not Very Interesting

WHITE HOLES. By John Gribbin. Delacorte. 250 Pages. $8.95.

It seems almost impossible that someone could take a potentially fascinating topic such as the beginning, or future, of the universe and make it dull.

But John Gribbin has done that.

What is supposed to be a sort of a challenge to the theory of "black holes" reads like little more than a series of revised lectures bound up for public consumption.

Some scientists believe that stars collapse into themselves and the result becomes an incredibly powerful mass of gravitational energy. Hence "black holes." A study of this theory once said that collapsed gravity is so heavy that a spoonful would go completely through the planet earth.

Gribbin writes, however, about the opposite, that the universe is a growing body because of a gushing energy from "white holes."

AGE DISCRIMINATION REFORM

A few weeks ago, I wrote in this column about the Foster Grandparents program. I noted that one of the reasons this program is such a success is that it makes good use of the skills and experience of senior citizen volunteers, people who still have much to give but in some instances have been "put on the shelf" prematurely by mandatory retirement.

The "mandatory" retirement age of 65 got its start in the 1930's. When Congress created the Social Security program, it arbitrarily selected 65 as the age at which a person would become eligible for Social Security benefits. There was nothing magic about the age 65, no scientific studies showing that this was the age when people suddenly stopped being productive workers. It simply seemed like a good age to let people retire and begin collecting benefits, if they wanted to do so.

Since then, much has happened to lengthen the working life of Americans. Breakthroughs in medical research have given Americans longer and healthier lives. Other technological advances have made our jobs less physically demanding, putting more of a premium on mental alertness than physical strength. Because of these factors, any change in the customary retirement age logically should have been a change upward.

Unfortunately, just the opposite has happened. The age of 65, first suggested as an eligibility age for voluntary retirement, has evolved into the age at which people can be forced out of work. At a time when they have their most and best to give, many of our older workers are being forced into unwanted and spirit-destroying idleness. The National Institute on Aging recently found that three-fourths of our citizens over 65 are "intellectually and socially able, mentally vigorous, interested in their surroundings, eager to participate in the social life of family, kin and community." By forcing these people into retirement, we waste a valuable resource.

Fortunately, that situation will improve somewhat, thanks to legislation recently approved by the House and Senate. The bill will make it illegal to force most workers to retire because of age before they are 70. The protection of this law, which will be phased in during the next few years, will not prevent an employer from dismissing an employee who has become incompetent, nor will it prevent a worker from taking voluntary retirement before age 70 if he wishes.

When Congress first enacted the Older Americans Act in 1965, we established as a goal for the elderly "freedom, independence and exercise of individual initiative in planning their own lives." Abolishing mandatory retirement at 65 is an important step toward that goal.

Plague of bladder infections

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB--Is there any hope for women who are plagued with constant bladder infections? It's like a chronic disease, once you get it, it's always there. Since I've reached 40 I seem to get it four or five times a year and it lasts at least six to eight weeks. I am very discouraged with all the expense of pills and doctor bills and having this pesky infection.

My doctor says to avoid spicy foods, others say avoid coffee and tea, tomatoes and oranges or acid foods.

I drink about 10 cups of coffee (usually decaffeinated) or tea daily and at least five glasses of water. Is my addiction to coffee making the infection harder to clear up? I've read that a phosphoreus deficiency is the cause of bladder infections. Is that true?

DEAR READER--This is a fairly common problem for women. It creates a need to urinate frequently, burning during urination and is a drag on a woman's energy and feeling of well being. If the infection involves the kidney as well, and it may, then fever and other symptoms occur.

A woman who is having recurrent bladder infections should have a complete examination to find out if there is any structural abnormality present. The urethra can be constricted or it may be in the wrong position or there may be a stone present. If the bladder is not emptying adequately that will set the stage for repeated infections. Any such abnormalities should be corrected.

Sexual relations may aggravate cystitis. When a young woman begins an active sex life she may start having these problems. That is why it is sometimes called honeymoon cystitis. There are some things a woman can do to help in this regard. Among these is to empty the bladder immediately after relations and drink some extra fluids to ensure a good flushing of the bladder. That goes along with my general recommendations to women to be sure and drink plenty of fluids and then be sure to empty the bladder frequently. Office workers sometimes do not go to the bathroom often enough and the full bladder simply makes matters worse.

Some doctors recommend that a woman take an antibiotic after relations, usually Penicillin G or Macrodantin. This might result in taking lots of medicine, though, in a young active couple on their honeymoon. Itis worth asking your doctor about. Tub baths should probably be avoided; showers are preferable.

The important thing about your food and fluids is to drink enough fluids to maintain a good urinary flow. With some medicines (such as Mandelamine) it is necessary to acidify the urine. In that case orange juice, fruits and vegetables (but not cranberries, plums and prunes) may have the opposite effect. If an acid urine is necessary your doctor can recommend test tapes that enable you to test your urine and find out if it is in the desired range of acidity or not. This may not be necessary if the medicines you are taking act whether the urine is acid or alkaline.

Readers who want information on what to do about an expanding waistline can send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle. Martha Angle and Robert Walters

Making Washington proud

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON – (NEA) – There's an unfortunate tendency – too frequently inspired and encouraged by the news media – to view the nation's capital as a city populated almost exclusively by bumbling and corrupt bureaucrats.

Washington undoubtedly has more than its share of scoundrels and scandals, but it has its quota of intelligent, dedicated, creative men and women working to improve themselves and their society.

Typical of the people in that latter category is William M. Burke, a 31-year-old Massachusetts native who is part visionary and part hard-headed businessman.

His unique specialty is providing a full range of services to the hordes of college students who descend on this city every year for internships, work-study projects and other programs that allow them to view their government at work and to participate in that program.

Uncounted thousands of students now make that pilgrimage and their number grows annually. They come from big cities and rural communities. Some stay for only a month; others settle in for a year. Some are highly motivated with clearly defined goals; others are not.

Most make the trip under the auspices of their college or university, and that's where the trouble begins. Typically a political science professor is temporarily detached from teaching duties to supervise the Washington program.

That faculty member may be one of the country's leading authorities on the Federalist Papers, but he or she invariably has little or no expertise in finding student housing, locating temporary jobs or lining up guest lecturers.

That's where Burke comes in. After five years at the University of Massachusetts, including a stint as director of its Washington intern program, he resigned in April 1975 to pursue a dream.

Two months later, Burke had established the non-profit Washington Center for Learning Alternatives, an organization that provides visiting students with everything from dormitory rooms to professionally taught courses.

No fewer than nine banks turned down Burke's request for loans to finance the untested concept, so he scraped together $30,000 from friends, relatives and small loans. The money was used as a down payment on a downtown building with 132 efficiencies and 40 one-bedroom apartments.

When Burke quit his job in New England, he didn't have a commitment from a single college to participate in the venture. Today there are 174 schools affiliated with the program, many of them small instituitions that send only two or three students per semester to Washington.

Burke convinced the Exxon Educational Foundation to provide an $82,000 grant for development of an academic program that now ranged from conventional courses on the federal budget, foreign policy and Congress, to more esoteric offerings on sexual politics and the performing arts.

The Xerox Corporation donated $10,000 to aid in recruiting black students. The Olin Corporation Charitable Trust gave another $3,000. Participating schools pay $700 for each student they send, but they can dispense with the services of the faculty coordinator.

During its first year of operation, in 1976, the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives had a $150,000 deficit. This year, Burke expects to almost balance his budget. Despite that initial debt, he refuses to skimp on the supervision and organization necessary for a successful program.

Burke's most important asset is his infectious enthusiasm. He's already dreaming about a Washington program for graduate students and the possibility of similar operations in other major cities.

Burke isn't working on any major foreign policy initiatives or seeking to resolve the overriding domestic problems of our time. But he's one of the thousands of people who make Washington proud – not ashamed – of their city.
